Ford Is Winner In Stock Car Race

The seventh annual Decoration day stock car race over the Oakland Speedway again proved Ford speed and stamina when Al Eames piloted a Ford to first place in three hours, 28 minutes and 15 seconds to average 73.45 miles per hour for the 250 laps.

This fact was pointed out this week by local Ford dealers who called attention to the fact that last years race also was won by a Ford driver, by Frank Phillips who came in this year in second place, only 22 seconds behind the winner.

Out of the first 10 to finish in the race, Ford took first place, second place, fourth place, seventh place and tenth place, again demonstrating in the opinion of local Ford dealers its superiority, stamina and staying power as well as its speed and pickup.

"In every stock car test wherever it be—speedway races, dirt track races, road races in South and Central American countries or other competitive stock car events, Ford proves in competition the claims made by owners and dealers for its performance," said Paul Beare, local Ford dealer.

"It is probably because of this exceptional performing ability that Fords are universally preferred by the younger generation and are deemed unexcelled for powerful car and other strenuous types of motor transportation where pickup, speed and stamina are the essential requirements."
