Traffic Count Shows Gain on Highway 99

According to figures compiled by the checking stations at the California border, for the first six months of 1941, Pacific highway U. S. 99 made a six per cent gain over the same months in 1940, or 1,313 more foreign cars.

This is a good gain considering the competition of the Redwood and coast highways on the west and U. S. 97 and U. S. 395 on the east, and there is an indication that 1941 will break all records for travel through the Shasta-Cascade area, where the total gain is 36 per cent over the same period of 1940. These figures are for foreign cars only and the local travel has been even better.
