Join In The Holiday Spirit!

Be sure to come downtown to the Christmas opening tonight—you can't help but have fun mingling with the hundreds of enthusiastic window-shoppers, listening to the music of the high school band and watching the expressions of the kiddies as they receive their gifts from old Santa who can still bring cheer in spite of the gloom and uncertainties of today.

The merchants have cooperated almost 100 percent in providing prizes, decorating windows, arranging displays and assisting the chamber of commerce in the details of the arrangements—so all that is lacking now is your presence to add to the contagion of holiday good fellowship which will be the success barometer of the opening.

The earlier opening date this year is also to your advantage in that it allows more time for a sensible selection of gifts and the avoidance of that "what to get" panic the day before Christmas. Under present conditions those useful practical gifts of today may become the luxuries of tomorrow.

FARMERS ASKED FOR SCRAP IRON

Oregon farmers have been asked to participate in the nationwide campaign for the collection of scrap iron and steel to aid the defense program. Farms of the United States are considered one of the most important sources of scrap supplies, which now are urgently needed for use by steel manufacturers for combining with pig iron.

Robert B. Taylor of Adams, chairman of the Oregon USDA defense board, is asking the cooperation of all county boards in carrying on a drive for the collection of scrap iron in connection with the current campaign to see that usable machinery is repaired early for use next year.

A graduated scale of prices for farm scrap throughout the United States, based on distance from consuming centers, has been set up so that farmers will know approximately what they will receive for their material at the various assembling points. For Oregon a price of 61 cents per 100 pounds at Portland has been established. The amount received by the farmers, however, will be this price less the cost of shipping to Portland and the cost of preparing the scrap for shipment to the steel mills, the latter being approximately 12 cents per 100 pounds.

The prices paid would not alone be enough to insure the thorough combing of rural areas for scrap, points out Chairman Taylor, but farmers will profit in other ways by helping provide an adequate supply of iron and steel scrap. If the flow of scrap is not sufficient to meet needs, steel output will be further reduced, which will mean that farmers will encounter still more difficulty in obtaining machinery and other steel products. Besides, it will be a patriotic service.

GRADUALLY, in this country, we are learning how to give, at Christmas. We have learned to discriminate between the useless, futile and wasteful gifts and those which perpetuate us in the hearts and the gratitude of those we love.

This store takes the lead, we believe, in just such gifts as this. And they are without number. You will always find something for everybody, and at prices which you shall decide yourself.
