Washington School
By SCHOOL PUPILS

Room 8 had a health project for the "open house" Thursday night, Nov. 13. A question was raised about the difference of sterilization and pasteurization, as we were discussing how to keep milk safe. Also, some started on posters, plays and modeling to show the safety of milk.

Room 8 has noticed an interesting subject of nature in an elm tree near the front of the school. We saw a bluejay visiting a grey squirrel's nest. The grey squirrel didn't particularly like his company and tried to chase him away. The bluejay seemed to think it fun and flew from branch to branch with the squirrel after him.

Part of the sixth grade boys are making wooden toys for the Junior Red Cross. Each boy is going to make about three wooden toys. They are going to hospitals and some might even go to Britain.

Washington school had an "open house" Thursday, Nov. 13. Classes started at 7:30. The children came in, took their places and began their work. This lasted for about an hour. We ended with two songs, "God Bless America" and "America." Miss Mitchell played the piano and Miss Hager led. Mr. Goddard welcomed the people. There were about 170 guests and 160 children. It felt very funny coming to school at night, although we had fun doing our work.

The girls in Room 7 are making spatter-work Christmas cards. We are going to send them to the Junior Red Cross who will send them to some of the different children's hospitals.

Betty George, who has been going to school in Lakeview, has come back to Washington sixth grade for the rest of the term.

The boys of Washington school are practicing basketball. Twenty boys have turned out for practice. We hope to have four teams. The play shed is going to have new backboards. Mr. Norby told the Cub Scouts and the other boys that he would give them a chance to practice on the junior high school floor.

All the rooms of the school had eye tests last week.

Marcella Prettyman made two rag dolls. After she had sewed and stuffed them she made clothes for them and painted faces on each. They are dressed in overalls and a dress. She embroidered the hair and eyebrows on them. They are going to the Junior Red Cross to be sent to one of the children's hospitals in Portland.
