"Win Or Lose" Support!

At the Quarterbacks banquet Wednesday night there were many evidences of a healthful attitude of supporting the team "win or lose."

There is no denying that we all like to have a winning team, but in general there has been too much of a tendency on the part of the public to demand winning teams. This sentiment has resulted in more emphasis being placed upon football and basketball, especially the former, than they deserve and coaches are driven to turn out winning teams with their jobs at stake. The demand for victory also creates an unhealthy state of mind among the youths participating.

To win games should not be the prime purpose of high school football. The mental, physical and moral training which the youths receive from playing the game is really the important thing. A coach may be unable to turn out a winning team, yet, through his example and inspiration accomplish more real good for the boys than if they won every contest during the whole season. Too, it is not good for the players to win consistently—the game of life in which they will soon engage is not made of uninterrupted victories. There the downs come with the ups and sometimes it seems more often. The player who learns to lose with grace as well as to win without losing his equilibrium, has obtained one of the best things high school football has to offer.

So let's continue this attitude of enthusiastic support "win or lose" which helps keep high school athletics in their proper place where the most good for the most students results.

The Hole In Your Sock!

"Hidden around this country in private purses now is the astounding total of more than $6,000,000,000," writes Paul Mallon. "Much of it is in mattresses, socks and private safes. The evidence is clear that a hoarding era . . . has reached suspicious proportions since the first of this year."

Many of these hoarders believe that they are protecting themselves against either inflation or a government fiscal policy which might force them to invest their money. But, as Paul F. Cadman, economist of the American Bankers association, points out, they have small chance of success. "Hoarded currency is a practically useless method of protecting the holders of property against the arbitrary acts of government," says Dr. Cadman. "Early attempts to hoard money in continental Europe to avoid governmental levies during and after the first world war were met by blocking bank accounts and suspending transactions on the exchanges. Outstanding currency ceased to be legal tender or to have any validity unless it was presented to a government agency and stamped to indicate that a tax had been paid or imposed conditions had been met. The holders of currency found themselves in exactly the same position as the owners of bank deposits."

The hoarding of currency is about 100 percent futile—and, on top of that, hidden currency is always in danger of being burned, stolen, or otherwise lost to the owner. Put your money in the bank or invest it. You will sink or swim with the rest.—Industrial News Review.

REMEMBER WHEN

—the circus came to town? The big day started with the unloading in the early dawn. There was always a parade just before noon. Then, maybe, you got in free for carrying water to the elephants. An elephant's thirst is hard to quench, but it was "worth" it. Remember?
