MRS. AMERICA IN THE WAR

- Stitch in Time
- Guard Cake Cutter
- Heels from Old Rubber
- Beruffled Nighties? Nay!
- King Cotton Not Snubbed
- Shoppers remember

A STITCH in time saves pinning of course, but ladies, you'd better start saving pins. That common ordinary household pin has a new importance today because of the War Production Board's ban on the use of copper and its alloys such as brass and bronze in many civilian articles. Seems that one third the pins manufactured in 1940 and 1941 were made with brass, and we're told the remainder of the country's pins were made of steel and their production is limited. Looks as if the pin cushion will be almost as valued as your jewel box.

GUARD those cake cutters, ice cube trays and manicure scissors as if they were of gold. For the WPB prohibited the use of steel for more than 400 civilian goods so it can be used instead to make tanks, machine guns and howitzers. This order M-126 will have quite an effect on your way of living. Starting at Mrs. America's front door with knockers, chimneys and handles out, it will continue on thru the house to the kitchen, the bedroom and even into the bath. Bathtubs are on the forbidden steel list. Incidentally and ironically, the order specifies that gold or silver are the only two metals which may be used as substitutes for steel.

ONE OF these days you may be walking but not riding on an old tire. Tests are being made to determine the wearability of heels made from reclaimed rubber. Once it was scrap material—old tires in junk yards or unused overshoes in an attic—but after being reprocessed it will be heels for pedestrians. And incidentally, if you need galoshes or rubbers, you'll be interested to know that a price ceiling on waterproof rubber footwear has just gone into effect.

COAT HANGERS can be saved from the war casualty list if a steel wire hook is their only scarce material content. So you can still have paperboard and wooden hangers.

BERUFFLED nighties are out for the duration. A WPB order restricting the style of nightgowns slips, petticoats and pajamas prohibits ruffles and excessive length or sweep of garments. It's estimate that doing away with the frills will save 15 percent of the yardage used by the industry. So when present stocks in stores and factories are used up, you'll have to content yourself with plainer lingerie.

KING Cotton, certainly hasn't been snubbed in the war effort. Cotton is being used for the important business of camouflage. Sand colored material helps in disguising waterfronts. Ammunition in forests can be concealed by some of the designs developed, and some of the others match gravel and field. Besides its use as camouflage cloth, cotton has other war uses such as for sand bags and agricultural bags. Certain percentages of cotton textile facilities have been ordered converted to military use.

SHOPPERS don't forget that when the maximum price regulation went into effect on retail goods May 18, that charges are fixed in individual store levels. Consequently, one dealer's charges for the same article may be more than that asked across the way. The shopkeeper may charge for each article the highest price he asked during the base period, March of this year. After May 18, stores are required to post the ceiling price of many representative items.

IF YOU'RE trying to stretch that sugar ration of five pounds per person for home canning, here's a tip from the OPA consumer division. Fruits can be canned without sugar and then sweetened as used. However, a sugar syrup does make a better looking canned product, and if you are going to show your efforts to your mother-in-law, plan ahead to use your sugar quota on your own specialties. The consumer division points out that fruits for pies or other cooking require no sugar when they are canned.
