League Series to End This Week

If the Medford Craters can win one of their two games with Klamath Falls at the Pelican's park Saturday night and Sunday afternoon, they will be the Oregon-California league champions. But if they drop both tilts, which does not seem likely, the Craters and Pelicans will be tied for first place and a play-off will be necessary. This week-end's games wind up the O-C league.

At Grants Pass, Dorris and the Merchants meet in a Sunday double header purely for the customer's entertainment for the outcome will in no way affect the league standings. Grants Pass, to date, has won two games, both from Dorris, and they stand a chance of finishing the season in somewhat of a blaze of glory by winning once before the hometown fans.

Medford won two from Grants Pass last week-end, Saturday night 19-10 in a free-hitting slugfest, and Sunday 6 to 4 in a pitcher's duel.

Klamath Falls routed Dorris on the same dates 19 to 9 and 11 to 10.

TWO LOCAL YOUTHS SIGN AT UNIVERSITY

Although applications for admittance to the University of Oregon for next school year are running slightly behind last year, more than 500 high school and advanced students have already been accepted by the University for the opening of fall term on September 21, according to Dr. Earl M. Pallett, university registrar.

Nearly every community in the state is represented on the list of applicants with Portland and Eugene vying for top honors. A number of students from Washington, Idaho, California and Hawaii have also applied for admittance. Those on the list from Ashland include Russell Hawk and Richard Henry Finnell.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By DON ROBINSON

BATTLE CRY . . . name

A name, a slogan and a song are still needed for this war.

Several months ago, when President Roosevelt asked for suggestions for a name, he wasn't seeking one just to have a handle to hang this war on in the history books of the future. He asked for it because he realized that names and battlecries are an important ingredient in arousing the American people.

The "War of Survival" was considered one of the best suggestions for this world wide death struggle. But for some reason that name hasn't taken hold, for most of us still use, for want of a better title, the name "World War No. 2."

We could call this war the "War to save Democracy" or the "War to End Wars" both of which are descriptive of what we want this war to be, but being left-overs from the last war we can't put too much stock in those names.

Probably what we need is a name which paints a glowing picture of a better world after the war rather than one which merely portrays the horrors of defeat—something more realistic but along the line of "The War to Make our Dreams Come True."

SLOGAN . . . spontaneous

There have been plenty of slogans which have grown out of this war, but most of them have been created by slogan-makers instead of being born out of battle.

We've been propaganda-ized into rallying, more or less, around the slogan, "Remember Pearl Harbor," but even though the Pearl Harbor affair makes every American long for revenge, the slogan is too reminiscent of "Remember the Maine" and is weakened by the fact that, so far as we know, it was created on the "battlefield" of Washington D. C., instead of by some hero of the Pacific.

The best slogans—the ones which have gone straight to our hearts—usually have been spontaneous outbursts of men in the heat of battle. It is the drama and the color surrounding them which imprint them indelibly on our imaginations.

"Sighted sub, sank same" would not have meant much if it had been a Washington invention, but when it was the expression of a

GORDON TRIPP LEAVING FOR EUGENE TOMORROW

Gordon Tripp, Ashland City band director and for two years supervisor of instrumental music in the city school system, will conduct his last band concert at Lithia park this evening. He will leave tomorrow for Eugene, to which point Mrs. Tripp and little daughter Stephanie went the first of the week.

Mr. Tripp's leaving at this time does not mean discontinuance of the concerts as arrangements have been made with R. H. Cooke to wield the baton the rest of the season.

RETURN FROM COAST

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Upington and sons and Mrs. May T. Catlin returned Monday from Crescent City where they spent a month. The Upingtons are preparing to move to Klamath Falls in the near future, since Mr. Upington's work keeps him over there most of the time. Mrs. Catlin will join them after spending a month here as a guest of Mrs. G. H. Hedberg.

young aviator in action, it appealed to everyone of us. Another, of the more rousing type, is exclamation of the marine going into battle who said to his buddies, "Let's go, do you want to live forever?"

Some slogan to stir civilians into greater action will soon evolve out of this war—but the chances are it will be shouted by a soldier rather than an invention by a Washington professor who is ordered to sloganize America into action.

WORDS . . . Inspiration

I have looked over lists of dozens of slogans which have been invented for such purposes as selling war bonds or to get war workers to speed up production.

Some of them seem to hit the nail right on the head, at first, but when I read them by the ream I can't help but recall the slogan-maker who spent a day in an office one time.

This professional slogan-maker wrote slogans for $5 an hour. All you did was give him the problem, you wanted sloganized and he went to work. At the end of an hour or two he had a list of slogans a yard long—and most of them were first-rate expressions of the problem.

Slogans for advertising, catchy combinations of words which stick in our memories, can be produced in that fashion.

But slogans which will rouse us to "sweat, blood and tears" must grow out of something deeper than clever mental gymnastics.

SONG . . . Over There

As for a song, I'll admit I don't listen to the radio much on these warm summer evenings, but I'm quite sure if there was a new song which was going to be the hit of this war I would have run across it on my occasional contacts with the ether waves.

Just as with the slogans, there are plenty of catchy war songs around, but we still need one which is written with "bombs bursting in air." If Francis Scott Key had spent the Revolutionary war days banging at a piano in some tin pan alley, we would never have heard of the Star Spangled Banner.

Today there are probably thousands of song writers who are frantically trying to write the 1942 version of "Over There," and they will undoubtedly produce some songs which will get a high rating on the Lucky Strike radio hour. But if there is to be a song which will really inspire us to greater war effort it probably will be written by a soldier who has been through a blitzkrieg or a sailor who has learned what it is like to have his ship blown out from under him.

Instead of attempting to do these jobs at home, we would be better off to turn over the war-naming, the slogan-writing and the song-composing to the army, the navy, and the marines.

DR. SHAW ENTERTAINS

Dr. Mattie B. Shaw had a few guests in for a pleasant afternoon Monday, complimenting her house guest, Miss Margaret Minard of Sacramento. A watermelon feed was enjoyed by the guest of honor, Miss Minard, Mrs. S. J. Bailly, Miss Ollie DePew, Mr. and Mrs. George Yeo, Miss Carrie Smith and the hostess.

RETURNS FROM BERKELEY

Mrs. Frances White returned Sunday from Berkeley where she took summer work towards a master's degree at the University of California. She reports a pleasant six weeks, although working all the time, and with the completion of a thesis will receive her degree.

Dick Putney, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Putney, 125 Nob Hill, paid his family a brief visit the past week-end, coming in Saturday evening and returning Sunday. Dick is radio technician third class in the navy and has been stationed at Bremerton, Wash.

Jack Forsythe, recently inducted into the air corps, spent a few hours Sunday with Mrs. Forsythe and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Forsythe. He made the trip here from Vancouver by plane, returning north by bus.

Health Hints

Basic facts have been established by demonstration that foods contain six kinds of substances—water, carbohydrates, fats, proteins, minerals and vitamins.

These six basic fundamentals of food are necessary to good health. To obtain them it is necessary to eat a well balanced diet consisting of meat, vegetables, (both root and leafy), milk, butter, cheese, whole grain cereal products and fruits.

Music and Health—Music is of value in the treatment of some types of disease because of its power to soothe or stimulate, to affect the emotions and arouse the impulses to action, and in this manner influence the vital functions. Music is a sequence of harmonious vibrations of an almost electrical nature that enter the ear.

There are three ways in which music may act on the body. Singing, alone or in concert, exercises the chest and lungs, giving the individual a chance for self-expression, thus harmonizing all the energies. Music with a strong rhythm, such as marches, stimulate to action and exercise. Music powerfully affects the emotions and tends to lift a person out of himself. Thus music is of value in relaxing many types of nervous tensions, and in this manner allowing the body to resume its normal function.

Phil Cavaretta, outfielder and first baseman with the Chicago Cubs, is in his ninth season as a major leaguer, although he's only 25. . . . The first fight in the present Madison Square Garden saw Paul Berlenbach win a 15-round light-heavyweight title over Jack Delaney on Dec. 11, 1925. Babe Ruth's lifetime major league salary totaled more than $896,000.

Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg and George Earnshaw each won 20 or more games for the 1931 Athletics. . . . Average time for American association games this season is 1 hour and 59 minutes. Last season it was 2:08. . . . Joe Walcott, former welterweight champion, is employed as a janitor in a New York apartment building. Grover Alexander is tending bar in a New York tavern. . . .
