Jacob Seeks God's Help.
Lesson for August 30: Genesis 32: 1-12, 27-29.
Golden Text: Psalm 46:1.

Jacob had found himself in a situation when, as one has quaintly described it, "he couldn't stay where he was and couldn't go anywhere else." Rid of Laban, Esau was before him. But the appearance of angels encouraged him and with confidence he sent messengers to awe Esau with an account of his brother's wealth. When they returned, reporting that Esau was coming with 400 men, Jacob was afraid.

Still depending upon the craftiness he had often shown, he divided his camp and then sent rich presents unto Esau. But he also sought God's help. And again, on the night before Esau's arrival, "Jacob was left alone, and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day," but no such man as had ever wrestled with mortal man before. Completely subdued by the hand of God upon his thigh, the crippled man still clung to God and cried, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."

At the end of all human effort and schemes, Jacob realized his utter dependence upon God, and a changed man limped across the brook Jabbok that morning, with a changed name. For God had said he should no more be called Jacob but Israel. And if, as some think, Jacob was lame through life, his lameness was ever a reminder unto him that in the hour when he ceased to be Supplanter his new faith had lifted him to the dignity of Prince of God. And may each one of us in our own Peniel learn the truth of our Golden Text.

WOMEN IN THE NEWS

BY JANET CUPLER

WOMAN of the week: At 30, Elizabeth Kelsey is an internationally known engineer, a fellow of the Royal Society of Arts and Sciences in London, and an associate member of the Institute of Radio Engineers and the International Television society. She is the author of a "Reference Guide to Ultra High Frequencies," published only a few weeks ago. Just what they have to do with winning the war is a military secret, but Miss Kelsey says that radio engineers in the army signal corps should know something about high frequencies.

NOT LIKE MEN: Mainbocher, Chicago-born designer who was the sensation of pre-Nazi Paris, is designing the WAVES' uniforms. Lt. Commander Mildred Macaulee, director of the WAVES, has promised that the uniforms will be "functional and comfortable" and that no effort will be made to dress the women to look like men. Military drill for officer candidates, she said, will also be cut to a minimum. She added that all parts of the WAVES' uniform "not visible" will be a matter of personal choice.

O SO SOLLY: Margaret Mitchell, author of "Gone With the Wind," has offered her Japanese doll, "Madam O So Solly," to the Atlanta chapter of the American Red Cross to be sold to the highest bidder. The doll, gift of a Japanese publisher, represents her royalty from the sale of more than 200,000 copies of her book, Miss Mitchell at first planned to give the doll to a shooting gallery.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES: The Savery, Chamberlain and Plaza hotels in Des Moines have been taken over by the WAAC. They will be used as specialist schools. The air force has agreed to hire women as well as men to teach radio technique to the men already garrisoned in the Stevens and Congress hotels in Chicago.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT: Members of the International Ladies Garment Workers' union have organized what they call the Women's Health brigade. To become a member each woman must complete courses given by the American Red Cross in first aid, food and nutrition, and home nursing. Members of the brigade take advanced courses in these subjects

SUCCESSFUL PARENTHOOD

HOW FRIENDS CAN HELP

Have you discovered how helpful friends can be in straightening out problems with your children? Take the 'teen-age who won't keep herself presentable. She is scornful of the least touch of makeup, and mussy hair and droopy clothes seem to satisfy her. Of course, sometimes girls go through these stages of carelessness because they are honestly so intent on becoming a second Mme. Curie or Florence Nightingale that thought of clothes and appearance seems to them in their young eagerness a very trivial thing. Other girls may be so disappointed at this age with the kind of face or hair nature gave them that they pretend to have no interest in looks and try to be as sloppy as possible.

Now here's where your friends step in! Choose the one who is the most attractive and well groomed, provided she is also a nice person—but she would have to be that to be your friend, for vain, shallow women rarely have genuine friendships. Take this friend into your confidence and together you can arrange a luncheon downtown with your daughter. Make it casual, you might better appear to run into her by accident. Ask her to wear her trimmest clothes and her very nicest perfume—your girls admire an older woman who has a delicate scent because they themselves can't wear perfume without feeling self-conscious. Now no matter how un-dressed-up your daughter may be at the moment your friend will make a casual but complimentary remark about her eyes, or her facial expression or texture of her skin or hair—even nice eyebrows or dainty ears can rouse a girl's pride in her appearance if they are admired by someone whose taste is superior.

This is just a beginning, of course. If the two don't hit it off try the plan with another friend. But if your daughter shows a spark of liking and admiration for your friend, then go on to further meetings. Have your friend drop in for a cup of tea about the time your daughter is due from school. What you are trying to do, of course, is encourage a friendship between your daughter and this older woman. (They may have known each other for years on the plane of child and adult.)

Friendship blooms slowly so do not expect miracles at once. When your daughter's confidence has been won, this friend who is clever about clothes and hair and grooming can begin to make suggestions to the girl about her appearance—suggestions she might ignore if you made them.

This same method often works in reverse—that is, if your daughter is too much taken up with her looks and neglects her brain try to foster a friendship with a woman who is both nice looking and intelligent, preferably one with an interesting career to her credit.

Not only will your daughter benefit but friends who have no daughters of their own will cherish an opportunity to have a hand in helping a young girl acquire the charm and poise of womanhood.

and receive training in military drill by members of the American Legion. Some of the women now taking their preliminary training work until 4:30, begin their classes at 5. Doesn't that make you wonder why a few women still say they would like to help more but "just don't have the time?"
