Nature's Signposts

Nature provided enduring signposts along the route of the Old Oregon Trail for the guidance of travelers. First of those strange freaks of nature looked, from a distance, like a mighty structure, causing the beholders to liken it to a courthouse, so it was given the name "Courthouse Rock." Near by was a smaller formation, which was named "Jail Rock." Perhaps the most striking and peculiar landmark on the Trail was Chimney Rock, which could be seen for many miles, a beacon rock and guide for all travelers. It is located across the Platte River from Bayard, Neb. It is 500 feet in diameter at its base, rises cone-shaped for about 300 feet, then a tall spire rises, another 200 feet.

The children of the train expected to see smoke coming out of it and were quite disappointed that none did. Next came Castle Rock, near the present McGrew, Neb. That rock is 1500 by 2000 feet at the base and rises 700 feet above the Platte River. It looked like a castle and romantic persons expected to see the gates of the castle fly open and mailed knights ride out on horseback.

Then appeared the famous, imposing landmark known as Scott's Bluff. It was named for a trapper and named Hiram Scott, who was wounded by Indians and who crawled for many miles to the shadow of the bluff to die. This famous bluff is 3700 feet in width at its base and rises 800 feet above the Platte River.

The United States Government has taken over this historic landmark and it is now a national monument. A road passes through three tunnels to its summit where a gorgeous panorama of the surrounding valley and hills can be seen.

Enough to Go Around

Now, for the first time in years, both farmers and manufacturers can work for the biggest possible yield without thinking about the market. This year they can sell all they can produce.

As things look now, this condition is due to keep up for some time, but we can't count on its lasting forever. Certainly nobody wants a prosperity built on war! So it's high time that everybody concerned—and that is everybody—gave some thought to keeping things running after the war.

You're busy, we know. So are we. The important thing right now is seeing that there's enough of everything to go around. But we've been devoting a little attention to the problems of the future, too. We feel that the people who have the producing job to do can contribute a lot to the solution of those problems.

And we hope that you, too, busy as you are with growing more food than this country's ever produced, will be turning these problems over in your mind. For if America's farmers and manufacturers, working together, can't find a way to keep the richest country on earth producing enough for everybody, and let the producers make a living in the process—if they can't, why then, who can? The daily program consisted of classes in the morning in Bible,

Q. What kind of Bonds are War Savings Bonds?

A. They are appreciation Bonds, that is, they are sold on a discount basis. After issue, they increase in value, reaching their full value in 10 years. The increase in value, which you receive when you redeem the Bonds, is the interest on your investment.

Q. How long will War Savings Bonds and Stamps be on sale?

A. No time limit has been set. The sale will continue until it is stopped at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Q. Can children purchase War Savings Stamps and Bonds?

By Glib Crockett.

A. Yes. Millions of children are buying them regularly as their share in the national savings program.

Q. Will the Government accept a personal check in payment for a Bond?

A. Yes; subject to collection.

Q. If both co-owners of a War Savings Bond die before the Bond is presented for redemption, who gets the money?

A. The estate of the co-owner whose death took place last.

Remember—the longer you keep War Bonds, up to 10 years, the more valuable they become.
