CONTINUOUS TRAINING OF
'DAIRYMAIDS' ANNOUNCED

With the first group of "Oregon dairymaids" now in training at Oregon State College and other applications coming in, the emergency farm labor service of the extension service is now planning a continuous training program throughout the remaining winter and spring months, with a new class starting each week, announces Mrs. Mabel Mack, assistant state supervisor.

Only a few new trainees will be started each week, which permits more personal attention and their use in the regular dairy work on the college farm. Application can be made at any county extension office or direct to Mrs. Mack.

Although Navy chaplains attached to Marine combat units are traveling in the company of men with highly colored vocabularies, they never forget their ecclesiastical background, according to Sgt. Jeremiah H. O'Leary, a Marine Corps combat correspondent.

Reporting an incident experienced by Chaplain Lonnie W. Meachum of Virginia Beach, Va., Sgt. O'Leary states:

"The chaplain was standing in a chow line when someone inadvertently doused him with a container of scalding soup. After a moment, he managed a wry grin and said: "Would some layman please say a few appropriate words?"

parents of a baby daughter born Friday at the Community Hospital in Ashland, Mrs. Green was Dorothy Dodge before her marriage.

An open house, sponsored by the Community Club was held at the City Hall, Thursday. There was a pot luck supper, served at 7 o'clock. The evening was spent with games and a program of entertainment.

The Talent High School basketball team played Eagle Point Friday night at Talent with a score of 34 to 46 in favor of Talent. Roland Parks of Ashland was the referee.

L. G. McReynolds of Grants pass spent Sunday visiting with friends. He is a former resident of Talent.

The Talent high school basketball team played an infantile paralysis benefit game Tuesday night with all the money going to that fund. Gold Hill was the opposing team. It was a non-league game. Talent won a hair raising thriller from the Gold Hill team by a score of 24 to 32 in a game that went into an overtime period. The players were so vigorous that officials, Roland Parks and Bill Wiggins of Ashland sent three players from each side to the bench on personal fouls. Gold Hill led the entire game until the last minute when Talent tied the score, then went ahead to win the overtime. The Talent second team beat the Gold Hill's seconds in a preliminary game.
