I'm Not Satisfied!

By Ruth Taylor

I don't like the phrase "selective service." Yes, I know what it means—in the long run, it is the selecting, without regard to class, creed or color, of the best of our youth—and letting them fight our battles for us. Stripped of all trappings, that is just what it is.

Of course, I admit it has to be. The young are better fighters than we are. They are fit for the job. But if we are going to let other people do our fighting for us, surely we can do our best for them and for ourselves in universal service.

No, I am not advocating a compulsory work-or-fight law or a draft of man and woman power. That would be just another form of selective service. Those who could serve best would be doing the work for the rest of us.

But—I'd like to see everyone accepting the war as an opportunity to serve in some capacity. If we would all do that from the housewife to the busy executive, we'd get this war over at a rate that would startle those who have counted their greatest ally the selfishness of free people.

I'm particularly strong on this subject because it was brought home to me with a bang the other day when word came of the death in a South Pacific island of the brother of a friend of mine. That very day she had been showing me snaps of him—a gay, fine lad, proud of his job and of his friends in the service. He was a devout Jew by religion, a typical good American by citizenship, from an average small American town. He wasn't a boy—but a man who joined up in defense of a country that had given freedom to his parents and an opportunity to him and his sisters. He had left a career in which he was making good. He left the job of keeping the home together to his sisters and went out to do his duty. Life was just before him—and he gave us life.

What are we giving that compares with this? What ARE we giving up? Little things that are really of no importance. Must we consider our future and get into jobs where we'll be set when the war ends? What of the boys who will never come back? They gave up their future.

We aren't doing our part. What we do and what we give up—whether it be in the things we can't buy or in taxes, is small compared to what our soldiers are

PLANE TALK

BY Rowland Burnstan

Jet Propulsion

A letter has arrived from one of the readers of this column asking if we would answer specific questions pertaining to the field of aeronautics. Within the limitations of the space provided we will be glad to handle all such questions if the subject matter is of general interest and the replies do not involve matters of public security.

The letter referred to asked questions about jet propulsion and if this in some way resembles "Buck Rogers Rocket Ship." There is a great similarity between the rocket ship and jet propulsion. The rocket, speaking precisely, is propelled by one heavy impulse or succession of impulses. This principle may be used on aircraft for quick starting from a runway or some temporary additional power under some unusual condition.

One Method of Jet Propulsion
A. Air Flow Guide
B. Fuel Burner
C. Fuel Heater

Jet propulsion, which has been in the news recently, employs the same basic principle, but there is an even flow of power from the propulsion unit, as in contrast with the intermittent impulses from the rocket. Jet propulsion employs no propeller or air screw. It involves a rushing discharge from the rear of the plane in the form of a jet of air or gas which moves the aircraft forward. This is not a new idea and planes have been flown for some time in Europe on this principle. Scientists claim the real attraction of jet propulsion units is that it will provide a powerful forward movement in proportion to its weight, making possible higher speeds than presently obtained.

WOMEN VOTERS' CLUB URGES COOPERATION WITH OTHER NATIONS

Concerted action by the League of Women Voters in 600 communities was launched today in an effort to secure foreign policy platform pledges on record for United States participation in plans for international cooperation.

The League is backing what it considers four essentials for platform statements: recognition of the place of the United States in world affairs; pledges that the United States take the lead in promoting international cooperation, join an international organization to keep the peace, take steps now with other nations to plan for international solution of political, social and economic problems.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY SEWING GROUP AID USO

The dance Saturday evening at the Ashland USO was an occasion for the Hospital Auxiliary Sewing Group to aid the Ashland USO. A number of the members went to the clubhouse and baked doughnuts, which were served to visitors throughout the afternoon and evening. A good supply was left for the Sunday visitors. Those who aided in this work were Mrs. Paul Finnell, Mrs. Roger Rath, Mrs. I. R. Flaharty, Mrs. Taylor, and senior hostess, Mrs. Ann Myer.

A full week end is promised for the Ashland USO the coming Friday, Saturday and Sunday, according to Director Jewell Lockhart.

Memorial Services Held in Ashland

Memorial Day observance began in Ashland Tuesday with a nine o'clock service at Memorial Rock in the Park, honoring World War I dead.

The parade began at ten o'clock starting from the Plaza. The City band led followed by various patriotic organizations.

At the cemetery service, the Rev. Earl F. Downing gave the invocation, and Rosemary Messenger recited the Gettysburg Address. Harold R. Merrill presented the main address of the day. The service closed with the band playing, "The Star Spangled Banner."

OSC COMMENCEMENT UNUSUALLY SMALL

Only an estimated 200 seniors and graduate students are expected to receive their degrees at the seventy-fifth annual commencement at Oregon State College the evening of June 17. The number is unusually small partly because of two previous sections of the commencement held in December and March. Total degrees granted for the three will be approximately 350. An outdoor vesper baccalaureate service will be held on the campus in the afternoon preceding the commencement.

Pulling Together

By GEORGE S. BENSON
President of Harding College

ONE OF THE FIRST political discussions I ever heard, that rose above the level of gossip, had to do with something called "the tariff wall," a high, protective, import tax. I listened only, as becomes small boys, while two mature neighbors talked it over. Their genuine interest was contagious and I still remember much of what they said. The impression I got might not have been accurate but it was fairly typical of views at that time.

Manufacturers in the North I gathered, were all in favor of a high, protective tariff. They didn't want foreign-made things to enter the United States and be sold in competition with things they were making. Northern manufacturers, I was informed, were Republicans. My neighbors, like most farmers in that climate, were Democrats and opposed to high tariff. If Europe had better and less costly merchandise to offer, they were in the market for it.

Farmers THOSE TWO respected neighbors have passed on, along with most men of their generation. The tariff wall, as a political issue, is dead too. I have told this homely story however, to spotlight an issue that is very much alive: Suspicion. All Americans need each other. Mutual distrust among men of different industries is a bigger hazard to this country than prejudices based on race or religion. Business progress requires confidence; credit is only part of it.

Besides being a great country, the United States is big. In its three million square miles dwell 135 million people. They can't all be acquainted but they need to be friends in spite of personal interests and tastes that differ. We have to look out for one another now or we're sunk. Groups do not have completely opposing interests. Farmers are not merely consumers; they are the real producers. Manufacturers and their employees, no matter what they produce or how much, are still the country's big consumers.

We Help OF ALL the people in America who toil, 18% work on farms and 82% do something else. It was not so 100 years ago when nearly two-thirds of our workers ploughed the soil, but things have changed. Now two farmers working in the field produce for nine factory workers whose families must eat. In statistics: Ten million farm hands stock the pantries of 43 million other laborers, not counting the white-collar workers.

The factory town is America's big market for farm products and practically everything else. Those 43 million workers last year received 100 billion dollars in air pay envelopes; two-thirds America's national income. Dreamers who careen their necks toward Europe looking for post-war farm prosperity need waking up. America's exports in recent pre-war years have been running less than 5% of the national income. Every little bit helps, but it's still only 5 per cent.

Devastated Europe can't do much for America soon after the war. Post-war favors will be from us to them, exclusively. And one of our greatest potential services to Europeans would be to lower our tariff bars and buy what they can spare so they, in turn, may buy more of our manufactured goods. We can't serve the rest of the world well unless our own people are prosperous. But if ingenuity and enterprise may remain free, our factories will hum and our farms thrive as never before.
