Oregon Pedestrian Fatalities Drop

Pedestrian fatalities in Oregon during the first six months of 1944 dropped 23 per cent under the total reported for the same period of 1943, Secretary of State Bob Farrell disclosed today.

There were 30 pedestrians killed in traffic during the first half of this year, compared to 39 for the same period a year ago.

In the city of Portland, pedestrian fatalities dropped 31 per cent.

While the pedestrian death rate is being reduced this year, Farrell pointed out a toll of five persons per month was still too high. Nearly all pedestrian deaths are the result of unsafe walking practices on the part of the person on foot, so greater care on the part of the pedestrian would bring about further decreases in the pedestrian death toll.

The unsafe practices of jaywalking, or crossing in mid-block, still accounts for the greatest number of pedestrian accidents in Oregon, Farrell said. Next comes crossing intersections against traffic lights walking on the right side of the highway rather than on the left, facing approaching traffic, and crossing streets and highways without looking for approaching cars.

"Oregon has won several national awards in pedestrian protection," Farrell said. "We can maintain the high standard of pedestrian safety only through wholehearted cooperation on the part of the driver and the pedestrian."

Defective headlights are a dominant factor in vehicle defects resulting in traffic accidents on rural highways, according to the Safety Division of the Secretary of State's office. The division today urged drivers to keep their headlights in good operating condition in the interests of safety and vehicle conservation.

"As cars get older, headlights need increasing attention to keep them operating at top efficiency," the safety division declared. "Reflectors get dirty or rusty and the efficiency of the light is reduced by as much as 50 per cent. Dirt on lenses also can cut down on headlight efficiency. When lights get out of adjustment, they may be a cause of serious glare to approaching motorists."

Defective wiring, improperly adjusted generators, old fuses and bulbs all contribute to light failures on older vehicles. A vehicle with one light is a dangerous hazard on busy highways and on narrow roads. The vehicle with no lights is an even greater hazard."

The safety division urged drivers to check their lights regularly, to see that they are properly adjusted at all times and to use the traffic beam only when meeting cars at night.

Army Commends Pacific T. & T. Co.

A certificate of appreciation for loyal and patriotic service was presented to the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company Monday by Col. S. W. Stanley, signal officer of the Ninth Service Command, at ceremonies in the executive offices of the company, according to word received by R. B. Hammond, telephone manager here.

The certificate, accepted by George H. Jess, vice president, on behalf of all company personnel, extends the appreciation of the chief signal officer, Maj. Gen. H. C. Ingles, "for loyal and patriotic services rendered the signal corps of the Army of the United States in the accomplishment of its vital mission during the period of national emergency.

"This acknowledgment of your distinguished contribution in furtherance of a future world at peace will be inscribed forever in the annals of the Signal Corps," the certificate states.

Col. Stanley praised the company for its "excellent cooperation and patriotic service to our country in the present world-wide conflict," and, in responding, Mr. Jess said in part: "We are deeply grateful for your thoughtful and generous recognition of the effective work of our personnel. We assure you that we shall continue to do our full duty, expressed in a performance which, in every respect, will accord with the highest traditions of the service."
