

Drowned Man Found In the Rogue River

The body of a man, found in Rogue River above the backwater of Ray Dam, was still unidentified last week pending full investigation by Camp White, officers said.

The body was found by J. J. Jenkins, of Medford, who was hunting ducks on Rogue River, and discovered the body while crossing the river above a log jam. It was wedged between logs and almost completely covered by mud and silt.

On December 2, 1942, two Camp White soldiers were reported drowned in Rogue River, above the dam, and only one body has so far been found and identified. The body found Sunday was dressed in a khaki colored shirt and wore a plastic identification chain, but had no identification tags. It was estimated by Deputy Coroner Carlos Morris that the man had been dead about one and one-half or two years.

Methodist Men Serve Waffle Supper Mon.

The men of the Methodist Church prepared and served a waffle supper to the Church officials and others who attended the business meeting and Quarterly Conference in the Fellowship room of the Church on Monday evening. Dr. Silas E. Fairham, District Superintendent presided at the business meeting, following which he discussed the post-war program of the Methodist Church which by the Board of Bishops has been named "The Crusade For Christ." This "Crusade" has five spearheads: The Crusade for a New World Order,

World relief and reconstruction, Evangelism, always the main calling of the Church, stewardship of the whole of life, building enrollment and attendance in the Sunday Schools. The "Crusade" is reaching out for the winning of more souls for Christ and for the raising of $25,000,000 for world reconstruction. Also Dr. Fairham led the discussion of Conference wide Youth work, and called attention to the new institute sites being selected and prepared for youth assemblies within the State of Oregon. Reports were given from the various organizations of the local church. The superintendent expressed his appreciation of the improvements which have recently been completed in this Church building making it now one of the most attractive worship and social centers in the southern part of Oregon. Dr. Fairham left for his home in Salem on Tuesday morning.

Dairy Subsidy Near 4 million in Year

During the one-year period that the dairy feed program has been in effect, nearly four million dollars in dairy production payments have been distributed to the state's farmers and dairymen through the county AAA committees, R. B. Taylor, state chairman, reports.

Payments are being made now for the months of September and October, at the rates of 70 cents a hundredweight for whole milk and 10 cents a pound for butterfat. Producers are asked to submit their evidence on sales as soon as possible, with December 31 the closing date for filing September-October applications.

From October 1, 1943, through August 31, 1944, Oregon dairy producers received a total of $3,831,212 on 702,558,800 pounds of whole milk and 8,965,242 pounds of butterfat sold. The number of producers receiving the payments averaged 16,761 per month.

Taylor points out that the dairy production payments have helped to maintain war-needed milk by relieving the squeeze on dairy producers who were caught between rising feed costs and fixed ceiling prices for their products. As a part of the hold-the-line program, the payments have been effective in preventing an inflationary price spiral for dairy products, the chairman said.
