

SQUALLS By MAUD McCURDY WELCH

Gramma's experience in squalls with her seafaring husband prepared her admirably for the role she was called upon to play when Nedra and John called off their marriage.

NEDRA had been crying. Sitting in her chair by the big window in the living room, Gramma went on knitting. In one quick glance she'd seen that the girl had tried to hide the tear-stains by an inexpert dabbing of powder around her pretty blue eyes.

"And not a minute too soon," Nedra returned quickly, sinking deeper into the fireside chair and turning her face away.

"Ho, so you two had a quarrel." Gramma knitted a little faster than

"No, a conflagration, an explosion, a dissolution, a parting of the ways." Nedra's voice was both angry and vehement, and a little "As bad as that?" Gramma inquired mildly.

"I gave him his ring. It's all over," Nedra swallowed a sob Gramma made a little clucking sound but she went on plying her needles industriously. At last Nedra burst out unhap-

"Well, aren't you going to console me, or congratulate me, whichever the case may be?"

Gramma stopped knitting for a moment, looked up. "You and John have quarreled before. They are something like the squalls we'd sometime meet up with on the Saint Lawrence when I'd made a trip with your grandfather on his steamer. He was a sea-captain, you know. Well, there'd be a terrible lot of noise and wind, and then the most beautiful calm you ever saw. It's natural for people in love like you and John to quarrel once in a while."

Nedra sat up. "Darling, you're an incurable sentimentalist. John and I are sensible and modern and analytical about love, as all young people are nowadays. We've had several bitter quarrels since we became engaged, so we've simply had to face the fact that we're not compatible and that marriage would be a mistake."

"It was sensible of course to face this before it was too late."

"It's the modern way," Nedra said in a small, desolate voice. "But love is not modern," Gramma observed quietly. Then she added, "but of course someday you'll meet the right man."

The sudden white horror of Nedra's sweet face was like a shock. "There'll never be another man, never!" she exclaimed passionately, as she rose and left the room.

Two or three days passed. One day at noon Nedra was lying on a chaise longue in her room, listlessly turning the pages of a magazine waving two important looking tick-

"Listen, darling, we're going places. We're shipping on a fruitthe tickets for a moment, "for Trin-"Where on earth is that?" Nedra asked indifferently, still pretending to be interested in her magazine. Gramma lifted her shrewd dark brows. "My dear, I don't seem to have the slightest idea, but if we stay on the boat long enough, I imagine we'll find out."

Nedra sat up. "Now, look, you absurd darling, if you're taking me on a sea voyage because you think my heart is broken, that's out. Girls these days when disappointed in love, don't waste time languishing. They go in for careers, maybe politics or something."

"It's been the desire of my life to travel on a fruit-boat," Gramma said fervently.

Nedra stared at her for a moment; then yielded. "In that case we'll go.'

So it happened that in a very few more days, Gramma and Nedra found themselves on a fruit-boat bound for the intriguing destination of Trinidad. And on their very first morning on deck, they both saw a tall, dark young man standing at the rail, gazing moodily out to sea.

Nedra's heart almost stopped. She clutched Gramma's arm and drew her around to the other side so quickly that she almost lost her I always will."

to bring these two stubborn kids together would come to nothing at all. It looked plain enough that John and Nedra had no intention whatever of making up their quarrel. . .

Next morning Mother Nature herself decided to take a hand. They awakened to find the ship tossing in a sudden gale, thunder roaring in demoniac fury, lightning flashing with every split second, the waves tearing at the ship as if possessed of the fury of a thousand devils.

Nedra dressed hurriedly, went into Gramma's room to find her also dressed, as early as it was. "Is it a hurricane?" Nedra asked shakily.

"I don't know, dear. I think I'll just go and try to find out."

to be frightened," Nedra pleaded. "I'll be back in a jiffy. There's nothing to worry about. At least

I think not."

She'd hardly disappeared before there was a loud knock on the door and John came in. "Nedra, Nedra darling, I had to find you, I had to tell you in . . . in case anything happened, that I still love you, and breath. "Hey, what goes?" Gramma asked in Nedra's own jargon. "That was John," Nedra exclaimed breathlessly.

Gramma straightened her neat black toque and got herself better organized. Then Nedra's voice came suddenly accusingly, "And you knew it all the time. You did this on purpose." She whirled around angrily, "I'm going to my cabin and I'm going to stay there."

Nedra kept her word. She stayed in all day, even though after she'd had her dinner, Gramma reminded her that there was nothing on earth more beautiful than a moonlit evening at sea.

What do I care about a silly old moon," Nedra retorted in a voice that shook with tears.

T SEEMED a stalemate, so Gramma went on deck alone and soon when Gramma burst in, excitingly found John, his boyish face looking tired and drawn even in the semilight. Gramma slipped into the chair beside him, and he said unhapply, "Look here, Gramma, a boat for . . . for . . ." she studied man can't go a thousand miles away, more or less, to forget a girl and stay on the same boat with her all the way."

"Why don't you two youngsters make up?" "We decided that if we quarreled before marriage, we'd do the same thing afterward. We're trying to be logical and modern but . . . " his voice trailed away sadly. "Well, someday you'll meet another girl," Gramma said lightly. "That'll never happen . . . never.

Don't even mention a thing like that." John's voice was hoarse with pain.

But just the same, it looked more and more as if Gramma's plotting

The next moment he had her in his arms. "And I still love you, John. The moment I knew the ship was in danger, I thought of you.' Nedra's voice was a happy whisper.

He bent his head and tilted her chin, "Which only goes to prove, dearest, that love is something that escapes all logic and reason and analysis. We can't argue ourselves out of it just on the pretense of being realistic."

"We were silly to think we could," Nedra agreed softly.

"The only reason we quarreled," John went on, "was because of my absurd jealousy, because I love you so very much."

"No," Nedra contradicted adoringly, "it was my bad temper."

John shook his head quickly. "You have the temper of an angel, and we'll never, never quarrel again in the future . . . if . . . there is a future left to us," he finished brave-

Neither of them was aware that the wind had ceased its wild roar and the deceitful sea had suddenly become as calm and benign as a summer day.

Still holding each other in a close embrace, they hardly heard Gramma when she came back and saw them together. "Just a squall," she murmured softly as she went into her own stateroom, a happy smile wreathing itself around her lips.

BE-KIND-TO-NYLONS WEEK Now, that your longer skirts and petticoats have forced you out of socks and saddles and into nylons and heels, we're declaring a "be-kind-tonylons" week. We appealed to our hi style scouts for ideas on nylon preservation and they've come through as usual with flying colors - also with fewer runs. If nylons are one of your economic problems you might want to try out their ideas.

Preventative Measures-No more snags and runs from rough desk and chair edges in school, if you take a piece of sandpaper along with you and do a competent smoothing down job. Then the only disaster you need fear when you get up to go to the blackboard is not knowing the right answers.

First-Aid Equipment-Carry colorless nail polish with you wherever you go to stop those runs in their tracks. Use bright red nail polish to identify your stockings with your initials at the tops to avoid confusion with other nylons in the family. Nail polish is good for the nails, too-in case you forget.

Proven Precautions-Wash your new nylons before you wear them and wash after each wearing. One teen tells us a pinch of salt in the first rinsing strengthens the fibres. We only have her word for it. Don't hang them over the radiator to dry. If your nails and hands are rough, put on a pair of cotton gloves before handling your nylons.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Syrup, at Home

Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by It. It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup. Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

And you'll say it's truly excellent, for quick action. You can feel it take hold swiftly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it cases breathing, and lets you sleep. Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.
