Attitudes of those who serve the public are so important in making or breaking a city, so far as the first impression that visitors and tour!sts are concerned that Ransey rambled through many places of business these past few weeks trying to find out just what impression she would hot, tired and (perhaps) a little Lovers' Quarrel hot, tired and (perhaps) a little dirty from a long trip.

structive criticism, Ransey decided not to pull her punches in reporting the things that made a bad impression upon her. Be it said, however, that many people who were stopped on the street and asked for information as to the scenic spots, were very well informed and most gracious.

While some restaraunts, made a practice of serving a glass of presentation of the menu, there were quite a few who only gave water if it was asked for, and some rather grudgingly at that, especially if she only ordered a cup o'java or a coke. Many tourmore tourists coming through, every day as spring advances, let's not let it be said that any one of them lacked this small service, in Ashland, All eating places have up-to-date rest rooms where harried parents can take their children while their meal is being prepared, but they can ger, and Mrs. Martin had cormake an extra effort to keep those places clean by periodical inspection, and signs asking the cooperation of the public. were, also, checked for the type of service being given, the gratis service that was so important to building up reputations before the war are not, generally, being maintained, altho these services are widely publicised. Most statgive a swipe at the front side because, after buying "five" in as many stations the rear windows still had not been cleaned, nor had the head lights been wiped free of dust. Some stations depend on a commercial window cleaner that apparently cleans the glass while the sun is shining but leaves an oily film that is most annoying when it rains.

Most service stations do maintain fairly clean rest rooms and should be complimented for this, O. Box 5422 Brookings, Oregon others would not make a good will observe their 50th wedding first impression.

Most stores maintain a courteous service, and hurried persons would not have to wait overlong to be served, but occasionally one finds a store where one is urged to take a wrong size, and one place even sneered and laughed daughter, Junior and Shirley, regave names of stores where she might be fitted properly.
