Mrs. Jennie Peden who arrived Jan. 15 for the funeral of her aunt, Mrs. Lydia Powers, left for her home in Washington Jan. 21. Mrs. Peden was a guest at the Everett Bailey home.

Dale MacDowell and two children of Talent visited at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Green, Jan. 21.

We were privileged to visit the Ralph Green home on Upper Wagner Creek Jan. 22 and see the extensive improvements inside. Work which Mr. Green has done the last few weeks.

The entire interior is finished in knotty cedar with alder flooring from logs which he cut from his home place and had sawed and finished in mills in Ashland and Medford. His knotty cedar makes a more beautiful finish than knotty pine because of the varied shades of the heart wood contrasting with the lighter shades of sap wood. His alder floors resemble maple.

Mrs. Delbert Goddard spent the afternoon of Jan. 21 with Mr. Goddard's mother, Mrs. Margaret Goddard.

Dr. Fred Goddard who returned home from San Francisco Jan. 15 has been ill at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Bradley of Tiller, Oregon, visited his brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Bradley Jan. 20.

GROFF-HERBERT VOWS EXCHANGED HERE

On Tuesday evening, January 17th Miss Mabel Herbert of Freeport, Ill. was married to Arthur J. Groff of Santa Monica, Cal. at the home of her brother, W. M. Herbert in Ashland. Following the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Robert McIlvanna, a small reception was held for the wedding party and guests. Among the out of town relatives attending was Mrs. W. V. Hoxie of Salinas, Calif., a niece of the bride.

The marriage was the culmination of a long ago but recently renewed friendship when Mr. Groff and Miss Herbert lived in Illinois.

The bride is a graduate trainee nurse and the groom is in the real estate and insurance business in California. They left on Thursday for Santa Monica where they will make their home.

Winter Pear Market Holds Firm In December

Winter pear sales in Eastern, Southeastern, Mid-Western and California markets are being maintained at the same satisfactory level as during December, despite a noticeable lag in the demand for other fresh fruit and vegetables, and a slight increase in pear prices at some Eastern centers.

Field men for the Oregon-Washington-California pear bureau in Ohio, New England, New York, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Washington D. C. all report good pear movement and continued strong demand in the face of a normal after-the-holiday slump in food buying, which has also affected pear sales in previous years.

Western pear shipments are running well ahead of last year, as they have been since the opening of the season. Latest figures are those of the first of the year, reported by the Winter Pear Control committee.

They show 25.6% of all varieties still in the hands of shippers and growers, as compared with unsold holdings of 39.5% at the beginning of 1929.

The principle reason for the improved sale of winter pears is the revolutionary change in attitude toward ripening on the part of pear handlers, according to R. A. Patterson, Pear Bureau manager who has recently returned from a tour of Eastern and Mid-Western cities.

This year most of the trade leaders are enthusiastically carrying on pea conditioning (ripening) programs, whereas in previous seasons a large percent has been indifferent or resistant to ripening. Fruit and produce divisions of chain stores have almost all switched to ripening pears prior to retail distribution and a majority of wholesale organizations now condition for their retail customers.

Consumers buy ripened pears in much greater quantities, according to reports of all field men. Increased sales vary with other conditions found in individual stores, but gains of four to ten times in sales volume are common among stores offering ripened pears for the first time.

In a few areas where abundant supplies of local apples are available, wholesalers fear that a slight rise in the retail prices for pears will slow sales, field men from those areas indicate. This type of fruit is not considered directly competitive with Western pears, but higher pear prices may turn some consumers to buying more of the cheaper substitutes for bulk use.

Walker Brands CVA Program As Unsound

"Opposition to CVA is not a negative approach but a positive stand for constitutional government, declared Donald C. Walker, Portland attorney, in addressing the Salem Lions Club luncheon meeting Thursday. George Rhoten, Salem attorney introduced the speaker.

Walker pointed out that the CVA bill, if passed, would actually be no law at all because there are not enough standards and rules in the bill to make a law. "It leaves too much discretion to individuals and is contrary to the fundamental principles of our government," he maintained.
