THE GENERATOR HALL AT HOOPER DAM IS HIGHER THAN A 6 STORY BUILDING AND HOUSES A ROW OF GENERATORS THAT LOOK LIKE HUGE DRUMS SET ON END. EACH GENERATOR IS AS LARGE AS AN ORDINARY HOUSE BUT THE TREMENDOUS POWER OF THE WATER FROM THE DAM TURNS THEM EASILY.

Biscuit Pinwheels

A menu containing meat and hot biscuits is sure to be a satisfying one. And when they are combined in one dish, it's a tempting use of leftover meat that many homemakers will prize, according to Reba Staggs, home economist.

For instance, cooked pork, left over from a roast, is exceptionally tasty rolled up in flaky biscuit dough. To prepare this combination, a regular biscuit dough is patted or rolled out to 1/4-inch thickness. The chopped cooked pork is moistened with gravy and evenly spread over the dough.

The dough is then rolled up lengthwise like a jelly roll with the edges of the dough pinched together. To bake, the roll is cut in slices 1 1/2 inches thick, arranged on a greased cookie sheet or baking pan and placed in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 30 to 40 minutes. These pin-wheels are deliciously served with creamed mushrooms peas or other vegetables.

Another interesting filling for biscuit dough combines chopped cooked ham and mushroom soup. For an unique touch, grated cheese is added to the filling just before it is spread over the biscuit dough.

Still another biscuit spread combines creamed chopped ham and mashed potatoes. A bit of onion may be added for flavor variety.
