Church Jubilee Visitors Expected

As Oregon Presbyterians approach the centennial milestone of the church's official establishment, many individual congregations are marking somewhat lesser anniversaries. Among these is the 75 year old First Presbyterian church of Ashland, which for three days the last of August will re-live and celebrate their diamond jubilee.

Beginning in the early "70s" as a union Sunday school and laer developing into a monthly church service, the mission in Ashland was officially organized into a church on August 28, 1875, when a band of 22 persons became charter members. Dr. Thomas Fraser, Synod of the Pacific missionary, was on hand to assist "Father" Moses Williams, who had been preaching in the south end of the Rogue valley since 1857. Samuel Grubb was the first elder ordained and installed in the Ashland church. Rev Williams served as pastor for the first two years during which time the building was erected on the present site at a cost of $3200.

Many of the descendants of the original charter members, as well as past ministers, are expected to return to Ashland for the three day jubilee.

JOHN GERALD MILLER

Graveside services were held Monday in the Griffin Creek cemetery for John Gerald Miller, 88, who died Saturday evening at the Ashland General hospital following a stroke which he suffered three days earlier in the downtown area.

Mr. Miller was born December 13, 1861 in the Griffin Creek area of Jackson county and had farmed in that vicinity and on the Applegate most of his life. He had been a resident of Ashland for the past three years.

Mr. Miller is survived by three children, Mrs. Gladys Bonfield of Klamath Falls, Everett G. Miller of Eugene, and Mrs. Joseph Dulin of Charlotte, N. C., a brother Walter of Applegate, three grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

A. T. Arant of Roseburg spent a couple of days in Ashland last week renewing old times with some of those he knew in the early "70s" when he lived in this little settlement of less than 500 population. Needless to say he commented upon the changes brought about in three quarters of a century.

Pioneer Mining Days In The Siskiyou Mountain Range.

by Roy DeMille

Those days of happy go lucky miners. True hearts and freedom, as the old miners called it. Their worries were to find that precious metal, gold and lots of it, the poor mans mine was the placer gold. with the pan he discovered his heaven on some creek bottom, digging the rich color in gold dust or some good sized nuggets.

It made his eyes bulge, his life was aglow, nothing could stop him but a well aimed rifle ball from an old 45-90 of some claim jumper, and no questions asked. In those days it was better for a sourdough to say nothing and know nothing. For the six gun or the rifle was the law among the early settlers and he miners in Jackson county.

In the 1840's, 50's and 60's, the flash of a forty five meant no back talk. In those days it was quick on the trigger. In the 1870's the prospector roamed the hills and the mountains back of where Ashland now stands.

Digging up the surface and the depths of the earth to find that precious metal. It was a metal that a human being would sacrifice his own life through hardships and danger for. The lure of gold was in their hearts and finger tips, a pride no tongue can tell. A great life it was for the old pioneer in those days, packing their supplies into the depths of the mountains over some old Indian or elk trail that made it hazardous for the pack animals.

In 1884 the Ashland mine was discovered by two cousins, C. A. Patton and J. I. Patton.

Shafts were sunk. Tunnels were driven into the rich deposits of the gold bearing quartz that lay beneath the surface. The Ashland mine was worked and developed by the two miners for a number of years, and then sold out to E. K. Anderson and a man by the name of Hawkette.

As the years rolled on, the mine holdings were purchased by Bennett and Matron, a mining company. Then mining machinery was installed and more men put to work Steam power was used at the mine to operate the stamps and other machinery.

The stamps were never used at the mine. They were taken down to Ashland and set up. The company bought an old sawmill site on Ashland creek where Ashland Foundry and Machine shop now stands. Working it over, they built a stamp mill and put through the process of milling the ore. The output of this mill averaged

HERMAN AUGUST BIRR

Services were held on Tuesday afternoon for Herman August Birr, 75, of 152 Granite street, who died Saturday morning following suffocation by fumes from a mattress fire in his cabin. He was a native of Pensanke, Wis., and had lived in Ashland for some time. His only living relative is believed to be a brother, Ernest, of Horcon, Wis. He was a member of Grace Lutheran church.

The funeral was held from the Litwiller Funeral Home with Rev. H. H. Young Medford officiating. Interment was in Mt. View cemetery.

tungsten is an essentially needed war material, the immediate operation on a 21 hour a day schedule has been put into effect. The Van Curlers who operate the mine say that when the present repairs and building work is completed they expect to begin employing a dozen or more men with eventual increase to three or four times that number.

Tungsten, which differs from gold in that it runs in pockets rather than in veins, is located at night by means of mineral lamps, then mined the next day. State geologists have made frequent surveys and seem to consider the Ashland tungsten deposits the finest grade of ore and say that it is the only commercial mine in the state. Shipment will be made from Ashland to Fresno, California by truck, where the western shipping point for government tungsten supplies is located.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh There it Was— Right in The Middle! Easy Roberts mowed his lawn early last Saturday. Then he sat on the porch, and watched Handy Peterson cutting his grass. The Roberts' property and the Peterson's border each other— with no hedges or fence between them. So, when Easy notices Handy had left about a four-foot strip unmowed along the boundary, he walks over and asks why. "That's your land," says Handy. "Mine ends here. See, it lines up with that oak tree across the road!" Easy didn't think so, so they went up and down looking for the surveyor's marker. Where did they find it? Right in the middle of their "no man's land!" Well, they both grin and take turns finishing the job and then retreat to Easy's for a friendly glass of beer together. From where I sit, a little searching around for the truth of the matter often shows that the other fellow is as much right as you are—at which point the whole thing doesn't seem as important anyway.
