

Washed Out Look
First Lady—"Dear me, I never saw Mrs. Potts look so pale."
Second Lady—"Nor I; she's probably been out in the rain without an umbrella."

Some Fuss
Mike, returning home with Pat: "Are you sure you told your wife you were bringing me home to dinner?"
Pat: "I'll say I did—and we had some argument about it."

"Breaking Up" Water Water, which consists of hydrogen and oxygen, can be broken up into these elements by electrolysis. If two wires, carrying a direct electrical current, are placed in water, bubbles of oxygen form around the one connected to the negative side of the battery or generator, while oxygen forms around the wire connected to the positive terminal. Usually a small amount of acid must be added to the water to make it conductive of electricity. Also, if heated in the form of steam, is heated to a very high temperature, around 3500 F, it separates into hydrogen and oxygen. These recombine to form water as the temperature is lowered again.

Meditations

Somebody sent me a postcard, asking me if I would like to define democracy. I didn't care to do it at the moment but I think democracy is a state of affairs under which people feel free to send postcards to perfect strangers asking them to define democracy.—R. L. Duffus.

God never alters the robe of righteousness to fit the man, but the man to fit the robe.

Longer Life for Sheets To lengthen the life of sheets follow these suggestions. Reverse sheets every other time by putting a bottom hem at the top. Cover bare springs with heavy sheet or sheeting to avoid snagging bed linens. And check all beds for needed carpentry. Put a mattress pad between the sheet and the mattress to avoid the abrasive action of the rough ticking against the sheet. Loosen the edges of the sheet all around before stripping the bed. Use mild solution of bleaches and rinse thoroughly, or better still, let the sunshine do your bleaching. Always rinse thoroughly to remove traces of soap and soap powders.
