Crocodile Worsnip

The crocodile was worshipped in some parts of ancient Egypt and despised as evil in others—a fact leading to serious feuds between neighboring towns. El Faiyum, 52 miles south of Cairo, is but one of several sites once known as Crocodopolis—City of Crocodiles. In some places where they were worshipped they were fed bread, meat, and wine, and their numbers increased so that "it was not safe for anyone to wash his feet or draw water at the river without extreme caution."

To lift up the hands in prayer gives God glory, but a man with a dungfork in his hand, a woman with a sloop-pail, gives him glory too. He is so great that all things give him glory if you mean they should. So then, brethren, live.—Gerard Manley Hopkins.

When men speak ill of thee, live so that nobody will believe them.—Plato.

The establishment of Christianity in the world does not rest on any miracle but the miracle of being the broadest and most humane doctrine.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Religious feeling is as much a verity as any other part of human consciousness; and against it, on the subjective side, the waves of science beat in vain.—John Tyndall.
