Poor Sight Life insurance examinations of 2,000 executives, average age 42½ years, showed that 12.1 per cent of these businessmen suffered from seeing difficulties which they had not bothered to correct with glasses. The only disorders among the examinees which were more numerous than faulty vision were overweight or underweight, abnormal heart condition, and high blood pressure.

Right Clothing

A light jacket is essential when fishing in the mountains, both in spring and summer. Early morning or late evening breezes are often very cool and the light leather jacket or poplin windbreaker is good the year 'round in high country. A slicker or plastic raincoat will come in handy for sudden rain squalls.

Your list of accessories besides rod, reel, line, and hip boots should include a creel, landing net, bait box spinner-and-lure box, leader box, split shot, snelled hooks, jack-knife or small hunting knife, a fishing license and directions on how to get to your fishing spot.

Waders of the waist-high variety are not essential for stream fishing in spring. Most bait fishing is done from shore. Lake fishing may call for waist-high waders. In all cases, cultivate a healthy respect for the water. Losing your footing is no fun and the water is uncomfortably cold and often dangerously swift.

A pair or two of heavy wool socks in rubber boots when fishing in the spring will cushion the foot against uneven rocks. Wool socks also keep your feet warm despite the low temperature of the water in which you may be wading.

As a word of precaution, in the springtime it is a good idea to put a couple of blankets in the back of your car when starting out in the Rocky Mountains. These blankets, plus a couple of chocolate bars may prove to be life-savers if you get stuck in mud or snow. A coffee pot and a can of coffee under the back seat might be useful on such an occasion, too.

Wear loose, comfortable trousers, a woolen shirt, a short fishing jacket with plenty of pockets and a felt hat when you start fishing. Remember a belt too... for holding up your boots. The bulge at the waistline may sustain your trousers but the extra tug of boots may cause you embarrassment in the end!

The hippopotamus differs from the rhinoceros in having four instead of three toes.

Surprise!

It was a very unhappy landing for a large flock of Canada geese which stopped for a rest in Raleigh county one night a few days before the goose season opened. The incident was reported to the conservation commission by Conservation Officer Progresso Tocado.

Instead of a placid pond, the honkers came down about 11 o'clock on the sheet metal roof of the machine shop of the Winding Gulf Collieries at Riffe's Branch. Floodlights shining on the roof was believed to have attracted the geese.

Hearing a commotion of thumping, honking and hissing on the roof, Nightwatchman E. E. Rineheart at first was startled. Then, realizing what was happening, he rushed outside amidst floundering geese and flapping wings, and turned off the lights. Soon the thumps on the roof stopped and Rineheart turned the lights back on. All but six of the geese promptly took off. The six appeared dazed and some were bloody but all but one soon staggered up and made takeoffs. The remaining one, still stunned, was captured. By morning he had recovered his equilibrium and Rineheart carried him home and placed him in a chicken coop. Tocado was notified, came and examined the goose and found both wings apparently in working condition. Carrying the honker to the 600-acre lake at Flat Top, the officer placed him in the water to recuperate. Returning to the lake two days later to check on his patient, Tocado found the latter apparently had resumed his southward flight.

The bald eagle was adopted as our national emblem by the Congress on June 20, 1782.

Hard to Beat

A good split bamboo fly rod is a thing of beauty and personality. When you hold it in your hand it seems to say to you, "Let's go fishing!" It asks for a place on your team, and promises an eager participation that helps you capture all the fun there is in fishing.

The best rods are made from selected hard Tonkin cane, split with the grain, heat-treated and straightened, milled to a mathematically correct taper accurate to 1/1000 inch, and glued into the six-strip sections that make up the complete rod.

These rods are sensitive as a bear's sore nose, powerful as an archer's bow.

Good Dry Flies

Dry flies, as their name indicates, are tied so they will float. They must be tied on light hooks and have hackle that is stiff and glossy. One must pay a good price for really good dry flies, for they are expensive. If one wants the best—and nothing else should do—one must pay more, but results will more than compensate for the outlay. Poorly-tied dry flies won't float properly and, consequently, won't catch as many fish as those properly tied.

It's A Gift

It was Smedley's first night in jail and he noticed that one of the inmates in his block would call out a number and the rest would howl with glee. Then the process was repeated by someone else.

Smedley asked his cellmate what it was all about and got this answer: "Well, we've been here so long and heard the same jokes so many times, we numbered the stories to save time. Now someone calls out a number, and we identify it with a certain funny story."

Next night, Smedley tried his hand. "Twenty-six," he yelled. Utter silence followed. "Fifty-two," he yelled. Not a chuckle. "What's the matter?" Smedley asked his cellmate.

"Well," said the inmate, "it's like this. Some folks can tell a joke and some folks just can't."
