Problem-Solver
Even manufacturers of miniature motor cars have their problems with finishes. One such problem developed when the maker of toy plastic cars was puzzled over the way to equip his minute motors with authentic-looking chrome bumpers without upsetting production. The answer was found to be a specially formulated finish that will not attack the plastic and that dries in one minute, permitting continuous production. By means of it, costs were kept down and saleability was improved.

Up From the Sea
Magnesium, a metal extracted from salt water, is commonly used as a means of draining destructive electrical currents from metals buried underground or submerged in water, because it will produce as much as 1000 amperes hours per pound at 1.7 volts. These currents cause the metal to corrode if not drained away.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

Good Tackle Pays

A "believe-it-or-not" story about the Ocean City reel and Montague rod (pictured), inseparable companions for nearly 30 years, is told by a famous Hollywood cameraman who fishes along the lower coast of California.

One day the cameraman and a friend were fishing side by side, using anchovies for bait. The cameraman's friend put his rod and reel down on a piling, headed for the bait shack to get hot coffee. The rest of this exciting tale follows in the cameraman's own words:

Reel Goes Overboard

"Suddenly something hit his line, and before I could grab his rod, the darned thing went overboard and started for China.

Both good as ever.

"We dragged the bottom for hours, but couldn't find it. My friend was furious and blamed me for not saving his gear. About three months later a terrific storm hit Redondo Beach . . . broke up homes, tore up streets and demolished many piers. After the storm it was hard to do any surf fishing because of the huge quantities of kelp. However, I decided to give it a try. I made a cast way out and started to reel in. I had snagged on to something . . . and in came the rod and reel we had lost.
"Of course the reel was full of sand, verdigris and marine encrustations. My friend took one look at the reel and said I could keep it.
Reel Performance Excellent
I later soaked it in a full can of kerosene for a week. Then I took the whole thing apart and scrubbed every piece. I reassembled the reel and it has worked normally through all the years. Only adjustment was made 15 years ago when I sent it back for new washers. You'd never guess how much use and abuse that reel has taken and how many fish it has pulled in.
"The rod has been rewrapped, but even after all these years it still will match anything of its kind. Last job of this combination was in August, when it brought in a 27 and 33 pound chinook salmon off the Farallones."

Start Right

Before you try stunt shooting, learn how to hit the bull's eye of a stationary target. You'll make greater progress.
That advice comes from Charles Edward Chapel, a top authority on guns and shooting, in his latest book, "Simplified Rifle Shooting."
In a chapter on moving targets and fancy shooting, Chapel tells how the graduate marksman can accomplish some of the best-known stunts of the exhibition shooters. Line drawings detailing several of the stunts were supplied for the new book by Winchester Repeating Arms Company.

Wait For Apex

"Beginners shooting at a moving target make the mistake of following the target back and forth with the rifle," writes the author of seven standard books for shooters.
The correct procedure, Chapel continues, is to catch the swinging target at one end of the swing at the point where it reverses direction.

Nymph? No Sinker

Don't use a sinker fishing a natural nymph unless you have to. The sinker interferes with the action imparted by the current and makes it harder to feel a strike. Don't let your nymph sink to the bottom and lie there. Keep it moving, fairly close to the bottom, and if it settles down, lift it up and start it again.
All flies in riffles are good spots to fish a nymph. The spots behind bars, rocks, in breaks and in the current eddies are good.
