WORLDWIDE PRIDE. Filipino lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) people march along busy Manila streets prior to a Gay Pride rally to push for LGBT rights and to celebrate the U.S. Supreme Court decision recognizing gay marriages in all U.S. states as a victory for their cause. The rally was scheduled to commemorate the 1969 demonstrations in New York City that started the gay-rights movement around the world. (AP Photo/Bullit Marquez)

Filipino LGBT people celebrate Gay Pride, U.S. court decision

Remoto said attaining recognition of same sex marriage in the Philippines may be achieved partly by working for an end to discrimination not just against LGBT people, but also against indigenous peoples and persons with disabilities.

Archbishop Socrates Villegas, president of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines, said in a statement that the church will continue teaching that marriage "is an indissoluble bond of man and woman." He said, however, that the church won't discriminate against LGBTs.

The church will study the U.S. court's decision "with assiduousness, and revisit our concepts and presuppositions, always with an eye to being faithful to the gospel and to the mission of the church," Villegas said.
