Once sidelined, romantic comedies rise again

CLEVER COMEDIES. Summer is always full of action and superhero pics, but this year a once dormant yet utterly adored genre is back in a big way: the romantic comedy. After a 2017 without any releases of romantic comedies from a major studio, this summer is proving to be a re-birth for this lost Hollywood staple with notable films such as Crazy Rich Asians and a Mamma Mia! sequel. Pictured are Constance Wu (left) as Rachel and Henry Golding (right) as Nick in the Warner Bros. Pictures, SK Global Entertainment, and Starlight Culture contemporary romantic comedy Crazy Rich Asians, which is set to hit theaters on August 15. See story on page 8.
