Thais dig in to keep an Asian game at the Asian Games
