vendors offering popular cuisine from Korea, Japan, China, Vietnam, India, Thailand, and the Philippines will sell spring rolls, chara masala, veggie samosas, chicken adobo, bulgogi, kimbab, potstickers, Pad Thai, and more. Demonstrations of more than a dozen martial art schools are available for viewing while devouring the tempting options at the food court.

For those who would like to learn how to make easy and delicious Asian food at home, there are demonstrations of favorite Asian dishes presented by local families as well as restaurants. This year's cooking demonstrations represent recipes originating from the Philippines, China, Thailand, Vietnam, Japan, Indonesia, and India.

To reflect the current national dialogue on immigration, the Oregon Asian Celebration is again featuring the Asian Heritage & Justice exhibit, "Our Stories: Immigrants of America." The display, created by Eugene photographer Melissa "Mimi" Nolloedo with support from the Wayne Morse Center for Law and Politics, includes new photos of immigrant community members accompanied by life stories of what it is like to be an immigrant in Oregon and America.

"Now more than ever, we need to share our stories," Nolloedo said. "Through these photographic essays, may we continue to build bridges of hope, strength, and courage to inspire the people around us to accept and understand that despite our differences, we are connected and similar in so many ways — our dreams, our aspirations, our love for country and humankind."

Festival admission is $6 for one day or $10 for a two-day ticket. Youth age 12 and younger are admitted free. Students age 13 and older (including college students)

GET SPIRITED AWAY. The 34th annual Oregon Asian Celebration, themed "Year of the Pig — Get Spirited Away," takes place February 16 and 17 at the Lane Events Center. In addition to children's activities (pictured), the event features an Asian food court, entertainment stages, and craft demonstrations. (Photo courtesy of the Oregon Asian Celebration)
