

How to clean the bundle of germs that is your phone

You can use Clorox wipes or wipes with 70% alcohol, which you can get at the drugstore, to wipe down your phone. Apple, which has cautioned against using household cleaners on its phones, says to do that “gently.” AT&T has further recommended wringing out disinfectant wipes before using them on a phone.

You can also use soft cloths to clean the phone, like a microfiber cleaning cloth or the cloths used to clean camera lenses or your glasses. Google says you can dip the cloth in soap and water, as long as you’re careful not to get moisture in the phone. AT&T says paper towels work, too. You can spray them with disinfectant. Again, don’t spray the phone itself.

Samsung, the world’s biggest phone manufacturer, says it’s offering a free phone-sanitizing service involving UV light inside U.S. Samsung stores and service centers. It will expand to other countries in the next few weeks.

The phone-cleaning step is one of many measures public-health authorities are recommending to try to slow the spread of the virus, which has infected 1.2 million people worldwide. More than 69,000 have died.

COVID-19 CALL TO ACTION

OREGON ATTORNEY GENERAL ELLEN ROSENBLUM'S STEERING COMMITTEE AGAINST HATE CRIMES

In Oregon, every person has the right to equal protection under the law—and to live free from violence and discrimination.

To target and stigmatize China for the outbreak and world-wide spread of the COVID-19 pandemic creates an inexcusable risk of harm to all Asians, as well as to those perceived as Asian.

COVID-19 has increasingly been inappropriately referred to as an Asian disease, along with other blatantly incorrect descriptions. Oregon's Asian, Asian-American, and Pacific Islander communities, and those perceived as Asian, have, as a direct result of such misinformation, increasingly experienced stigma, xenophobia and discrimination. Asian communities around the country have reported hundreds of acts of aggression and violence, such as being spit on, coughed at, physically attacked, and assaulted.

We, the undersigned, resolutely denounce all COVID-19 misnaming, blaming and harassment. We find reprehensible any language or course of action that casts blame, promotes racism or discrimination, or harms the Asian immigrant, Asian-American, and Pacific Islander community.

And we, the undersigned, stand together, calling upon all Oregonians to call attention to these harms, and to support the inalienable rights of our Asian, Asian-American and Pacific Islander communities across the state, who must always be treated with respect and must remain safe during this unprecedented pandemic that affects us all.
