Born—To the wife of W. W. Mode, Tuesday morning, Feb. 5, 1901, a girl. Mr. Mode resides on Ferguson Creek, about 8 miles by north west of Junction.

Emmett Mulholland, the boy who tends to the Oregonian's circulation here, is industrious and attentive to his business, and deserves the patronage of the citizens of this community.

We acknowledge receipt of the annual number of the "Golden West", an interesting illustrated and descriptive magazine, issued by the Wasp publishing Co., San Francisco.

Twenty excellent stories and anecdotes of Theodore Roosevelt, never before printed, and told anonymously by the "intimates" and closest friends of the Vice-President-elect, will be published in the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal.

Miss Jessie Gilstrap, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Gilstrap, and Mr. Romeo M. Gilbert, of Salem, were united in marriage by Rev. J. A. Cleland at the First Presbyterian church, Eugene, yesterday morning.

The January and February numbers of "Success", published by McGraw-Harden Co., New York, have been received with appreciation at this office. They are sparkling with information and good reading matter.

J. M. Cook purchased 17 milch cows the past week. This makes 23 cows Milt owns, all of which are being milked and their produce sold to the Creamery. This kind of an investment pays well. Those who are not engaged in it, should investigate and be convinced.

Congressman James D. Richardson, of Tennessee, now wears the hallowed mantle of the great Albert Pike. In other words, Mr. Richardson succeeds to the exalted office of Sovereign Grand Commander of the Southern Jurisdiction of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Free Masonry.

The Cascade Drug Store will be ready for business by the first of next week. Messrs. Gillette & Pitney, the proprietors, are busy getting things in shape to open up. Their place of business is in the store room formerly occupied by W. M. Keene as a cigar store, in the hotel block.

Junction City Camp, No. 446, Woodmen of the World, have secured the services of Prof. Menkin, one of the most distinguished western orators and dramatic readers, who will entertain the citizens of Junction some time next month. Prof. Menkin is devoting his life to the interests of humanity. He is one of the most interesting fraternal workers of the West, and makes sunshine and plenty of it wherever he goes. Don't fail to hear him when he comes. Watch the BULLETIN for date of his coming.

B. A. Stafford, of Albany, was in town looking over the Baber warehouse property, with the view of purchasing same, this week. Mr. Stafford is ex-County Assessor of Linn county, having held that office two terms. He is engaged in the mercantile and warehouse business at Albany. Prof. Groggett, principal of our schools, was in the employ of Mr. Stafford for five years, and speaks highly of that gentleman's business qualifications. The BULLETIN hopes that he will locate here. There is no better point in the Valley for a wide-awake warehouseman.

A Good Way
to save the cost of a new suit or overcoat is—let us have the old one to be cleaned. We will return it looking like new. Eugene Steam Dye and Cleaning Works.

The Junction City BULLETIN this week has a splendid write-up of Lane county and Junction City.—Guard, Feb. 1.

A first-class 50-cent shoy would draw a full house in Junction City. Best opera-house in the Valley. Managers should address C. F. Hurlburt, Junction City, Ore.

Dead Men's Good Intentions
never shelter the homeless nor feed the hungry. Good acts unfailingly produce good results. One of the best of these is to join the Woodmen of the World, and thereby provide for those dependent upon you.
