THE LAST DAY OF SCHOOL

by D. C. Murray

CHAPTER III (Continued.)

At the dinner the Father of the Family was the center of attraction. He beamed on his sons and daughters, and the table was full of laughter and conversation.

The guests were seated in a round table,
and the table was filled with delicious food.

The meal was ended, and the guests
began to retire to their rooms.

The family gathered in the parlor,
and the conversation continued.

The evening was spent in pleasant
company, and the family retired to bed
in good spirits.

THE GIRL WITH A MILLION

by D. C. Murray

CHAPTER IV

At dinner, the Father of the Family was the center of attraction. He beamed on his sons and daughters, and the table was full of laughter and conversation.

The guests were seated in a round table,
and the table was filled with delicious food.

The meal was ended, and the guests
began to retire to their rooms.

The family gathered in the parlor,
and the conversation continued.

The evening was spent in pleasant
company, and the family retired to bed
in good spirits.