"The Bird of Paradise." In "The Bird of Paradise," which will be seen at the Eugene Theatre Thursday Jan. 20, we will see a play that is now in its fifth season on the road and each year it becomes more firmly entwined around the hearts of the theatre-goers of this city. The piece is by Richard Walton Tully, author of "Omar, the Tent-maker," who has in the past few years become known as one of our best atmospheric writers. The production is under the personal management of Oliver Morosco, who is now known as one of the foremost American producers.

"The Bird of Paradise" is a sound, ethical, political and racial lesson. It is also a strong, virile drama, and contains a thoroughly absorbing love story. In brief, it deals with the love adventures of a young American physician, who falls in love with a native Hawaiian girl named Luanna, who is endowed with all the seductive charm that these beautiful native women have, but although in part a member of a Christian church, yet she has all the untamed passion of the savage. Another man, who is a human derelict, is lifted out of the mess that he has made of life, through the pure influence of an American girl, Diana, and finally takes his place in the world, a man again.

Manager Morosco, who has become famous for introducing new leading women, will this year offer Miss Charlotta Monterey, a young Californian, who last season was with Lou Tellegen. She will play Luanna. Others in the cast will be Hooper L. Atchley, as Paul Wilson; Richard Gordon, as Dean, the beach-comber; Miss Jane Haven, as Diana, and the sweet-voiced Hawaiian singers, who help to make this wonderful play the most talked-of drama of the century.

A Food Fact to Remember

Seventeen years ago a food was originated that combined the entire nourishment of the field grains—wheat and barley—with ease of digestion, delicious taste and other qualities of worth designed to fill a widespread human need.

Today that food—

Grape-Nuts

has no near competitor among cereal foods in form or nutritive value, nor has it had from the start.

Grape-Nuts on the Breakfast Menu builds and maintains body, brain and nerves as no other food does. Ready to eat, economical, appetizing.
