WOOD FLOUR USED BY

making, but wood flour has practically replaced them in this country.

In the manufacture of linoleum, either wood or cork flour is used. The flour is mixed with a cementing material, spread out on burlap and rolled or pressed to a uniform thickness. The cement is the expensive constituent. Cork linoleum is the cheapest because less cement is necessary. The patterns are printed on, leaving a dark base. For inlaid or straightline linoleum, wood flour is used extensively. Cork linoleum is always dark, and slightly more elastic than that produced from wood flour. The wearing qualities are about the same.

Two methods of producing wood flour are practiced; one using millstones, the other steel burr rollers to pulverize the wood. The latter requires only one-fourth as much power to operate as the former and was developed on the Pacific Coast to handle sawdust as a raw material. The mills of Norway which produce much of the European wood flour are of the stone type.

Wood flour mills are scattered over the country from Maine to California wherever the proper combination of wood and water power is available, and the domestic wood flour competes with the Norwegian product which, before the European war, was delivered at Atlantic ports for 12.50 to 15.00 per ton.

A GREAT PRODUCTION

At the Bell theatre on Tuesday, April 25th there will be presented the great Selig play, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," written by Rex Beach. In many respects, critics assert that "The Ne'er-Do-Well" is even greater than that other photo-drama, "The Spoilers," also written by Rex Beach and released by the Selig Company. Colin Campbell directed "The Spoilers" and "The Ne'er-Do-Well," and Kathryn Williams, who achieved such emotional heights in "The Spoilers" even surpassed the record made there as Mrs. Stephen Cortlandt in "The Ne'er-Do-Well." Wheeler Oakman plays the title role and the drama, filmed in Panama, the locale of Rex Beach's story, abounds in plot, counter plot, hand-to-hand battles, and strong love interests. Beautiful scenic effects are plentiful including wonderful tropical scenery.
