NATIONAL FOREST RANGES PRODUCE EXCELLENT STOCK

Northern Washington And Oregon Wooded Country Is Unexcelled Beef And Mutton Production.

District Forester George H. Cecil, Portland, Oregon, announces that after careful consideration the Secretary of Agriculture has approved an increase in the fees to be charged for grazing livestock on the National Forest ranges.

This increase will be made gradually for the next three years, until the charges reach a point equivalent to two-thirds of the charges made by private owners for grazing stock on their land.

Stock associations are being advised of this decision in order that statements regarding the views of their members may be submitted to the Forester by February 1, 1917, in case they desire to discuss the matter.

Investigation of rental values from time to time, says Mr. Cecil, has revealed that the Government charges for grazing on the National Forests are only one-third of the market value of the forage. Since timber and other resources should be disposed in like manner.

The National Forests were created for the primary purpose of conserving the timber and water supply. The grazing use of the ranges, which was found to exist when active control of the Forests was begun, was treated as a secondary matter and only a portion of the administrative cost of handling the Forests was asked as a grazing fee.

Since the National Forest states share in all the receipts from National Forest business to the extent of 25 per cent, the revenue to these states will be materially increased by this division.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, the states of Oregon and Washington received $32,820.65 as their share of the grazing receipts from the National Forests within their borders. Without considering increased receipts from other forest resources this figure would be double by the advances in grazing rates.
