

NATIONAL FORESTS ARE GOOD REVENUE PRODUCERS FOR U.S.

Receipts From Timber Sales Net
$1,400,000 Which is 20 Per Cent Increase.

MAKE MANY IMPROVEMENTS

Federal Government Is Building Up
Timber Resources And Making
Use of National Resources.

National Forest administration last year was characterized, according to Forester Henry S. Graves, Chief of the Forest Service, in his annual report which has just been published by an increase of more than $340,000 in receipts, which totaled over $2,000,000, by rapid progress in land classification, by a material advance in development work, in which road building is one of the largest factors, and by relatively small losses from forest fires.

The receipts from timber were over $1,400,000, a 20 per cent increase, while grazing receipts were $1,200,000, and water power rentals brought in $100,000. "At present," says Mr. Graves, "the receipts from the National Forests are approximately three-fourths of what it costs to protect them and carry on the current business. In addition to this cost, however, there are expenses which are primarily in the nature of investments." Roads and other improvements, reforestation of denuded lands, and classification and survey work examples. "All expenses connected with the National Forests, including these investment expenses as well as the cost of operation, approximately $5,275,000."

The business on the National Forests, Mr. Graves states, is on a thoroughly sound basis. "An efficient organization has been built up to handle the work of protection of the Forests and of developing the resource. The rapidly increasing use of the Forests points not only to constantly greater service to the public, but also to increased financial returns."

A steady increase in the returns from the National Forests is expected by the Chief Forester. In spite of the unstable and unhealthy condition of the lumber market a steady and increasing local demand for National Forest timber is created by the upbuilding of the country. This demand will be constantly growing even though sales for the general market will fluctuate with the prevailing business conditions. The returns from grazing will increase as more stock uses the Forests, in consequence of range improvement and the development of new range, it is stated.

A moderate annual increase for three years in the grazing fee is contemplated which, if put into operation, will eventually bring the grazing receipts to a more than $2,000,000 a year, as compared with approximately $1,200,000 in the fiscal year 1916. It is pointed out that when regulation of grazing on the Forests began a low scale of charges was adopted. During the last ten years the value of the forage to the stockmen has materially increased because of the improved methods of handling the stock which have been introduced. While some readjustment of grazing has taken place, there has been no general advance in the rates.

Instances are quoted which show that grazing fees on private or Indian lands adjacent to the National Forests are much higher than those charged by the Government for National Forest range. In one locality in Montana, it is stated, 81 cents a head was paid for grazing sheep on Indian lands, while a charge of only 13 1/2 cents per head was made on nearby National Forest lands. In the same place the rate on cattle was $3 on Indian land, as against 54 cents on the National Forest.

"The great demand for grazing privileges on a majority of the National Forest," says the report, "far exceeds the carrying capacity, and the demand is on the increase. Under these conditions the stockmen using the National Forest ranges are enjoying special privileges over those who must pay for range on a competitive basis or do without. It is an established principle of National Forest administration that the man who is accorded the privilege of exclusive use of land or material for a commercial profit shall pay the public in proportion to the value of what he receives. It is become plain that in crease of the benefits derived by stockmen from National Forest administration without a commensurate increase in the charge for the grazing privilege has created a situation which calls for readjustments. Before final action is taken an opportunity will be given for all parties interested to be heard.

Danger Signal
If the fire bell should ring would you run and stop it or go and help to put out the fire? It is much the same way with a cough. A cough is a danger signal as much as a fire bell. You should no more try to suppress it than to stop a fire bell when it is ringing, but should cure the disease that causes the coughing. This can nearly always be done by taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many have used it with the most beneficial results. It is especially valuable for the persistent cough that so often follows a bad cold or an attack of the grip. Mrs. Thomas Beeching, Andrews Ind., writes: "During the winter my husband takes cold easily and coughs and coughs. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine for breaking up these attacks and you cannot get him to take any other." Obtainable everywhere.
