MONDAY, MARCH 26, 1917.

Attention is deserved by the plan which has been devised out in Colorado Springs in order to systematize and render more intelligent the response made by people there and in neighboring towns to the many appeals now received by everybody for money to be used for charitable purposes at home and abroad.

A central bureau has been organized to get information as to the various committees that are collecting funds, and thus make sure, as the individuals to whom the appeals come not always can and rarely do, that gifts will be honestly and wisely used. The bureau also figures out about what amount the people of the town it covers ought to give to meet their share of the whole country's obligation to be helpful, but that is a feature of the scheme which may excite some criticism as altogether too "businesslike." It implies an inclination, not to give according to ability, but in proportion to what others would give if they gave what they should.

Be that as it may, the general idea is a good one, and there will be interest in hearing how it works out in practice, for it involves the laying of a sort of assessment on all who enter the organization, and the assessments are to be collected by churches, banks, clubs and social bodies. The funds are to be distributed, in the absence of special directors at the discretion of the bureau, with due care for local needs as well as those at a distance.

The possibility that the undertaking will fail because of what may be called its impersonality is obvious. The desire to get the sense of well-doing that comes from direct gifts to an object or individual definitely known is still strong in most of us, and it is what keeps up the bestowal of alms on beggars, though everybody knows, or at least has been told often enough that to do that is harmful and not beneficial. Organized or systematized charity constantly has to fight the feeling that it is "cold" and the Colorado innovators may meet the same criticism if they are too successful in depriving their contributors of the opportunity to "acquire merit" in the old way.

Mayors Asked to Aid
Mayor Morrison has just received the following letter:

Headquarters, Portland, Oregon, Recruiting District, Portland, Oregon, March 17, 1917.

To the Mayors of Oregon:
Your aid is desired in recruiting for the U. S. Army.

Men are needed; for without men, all the money and other resources in the world are useless. We need men who will lend their time and bodies to the Government for so long as is required to make them fit to efficiently serve the Nation in time of need.

Many vacancies exist in the Infantry, Cavalry, Artillery, Aviation Section and the Signal Corps; in fact, all branches of the service need especially clerks, mechanics, electricians, chauffeurs, etc. The postmaster of this city is hereby informed regarding this matter.

I am sure that cooperation will result in valuable results to the Nation. Very truly yours, E. J. Huebner, Captain, U. S. Army, R. O.

THE LOOKING GLASS

Somebody asked us the other day why we didn't have any more "looking glasses?"

And we felt proud and important and thought we'd try to "hold the mirror up to nature" some more.

We don't feel like trying to be clever today.

But we've heard how comedians had to go right on making jokes when they'd just gotten a telegram behind the scenes, saying their mother in law would arrive on the next train.

So we'll try to be brave too.

Not that our mother in law is coming but we just feel sad and gloomy, some way.

Heine, Adrian also looked mournful and we asked him why and he said he was sick and shouldn't be surprised if it were overwork.

We shouldn't either.

We guess maybe it's the "pinch of poverty" that's got us.

Everybody talks about the way "ontons has ris" and "ain't it awful how beans has gone up" until sometimes we feel almost poor ourselves.

And if times get any worse we're going to be like the little boy who said if he had a nickel he'd sit up nights and watch it.

Rank Foolishness.

You occasionally see it stated that colds do not result from cold weather. That is rank foolishness. Were it true colds would be as prevalent in midsummer as in midwinter. The microbe that causes colds flourishes in damp, cold weather. To get rid of a cold take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is effectual and is highly recommended by people who have used it for many years as a season required and know its real value. Obtainable everywhere.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to extend to the many kind friends and neighbors our heart felt thanks and sincere appreciation for their kindness and sympathy shown to us on the death of our husband and father and for the beautiful floral tributes.
