NEW SONG HITS IN PLAY

"September Morn" is Full of Catchy Music and Lyrics

The offering at the Eugene theatre Monday night May 14, will be the dancing festival, "September Morn," with its wealth of song, mirth, melody and joy. The book of lyrics is by Arthur Gillespie and the music by Aubrey Stauffer, two young men who fairly outdid themselves in this successful musical play for there are no less than six emphatic song hits. The title chosen from the famous painting by Paul Chabas serves its purpose in the story only and this novel entertainment will prove a treat to theatregoers.

The story has to do with one Rudolph Plastric, masquerading as an artist who sets claim to the originator of the famous painting. Complications arise wherein Plastric gets through the appearance of an actress, who claims to be the originator and actually was the lady who bathed in the open. There are a dozen principals and the show goes with a burrah, from the rise of the curtain. The leading comedy role is in the hands of nimble William Moore, who has played in many Broadway successes supported by an excellent cast and a sprightly singing and dancing chorus who trip through the seemingly difficult dancing and ensemble numbers fetchingly.

Among the many song hits that are now being whistled throughout the country are: "Oh! You September Morn," "When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl," "A Sparerib from the Butcher Shop of Life," "Beautiful Dreams I'm Dreaming," "In Parade," "Where is the Pleasure in Wine and Song if the Woman is Not There?" etc.

"September Morn" scored a long run at the LaSalle Opera House (Chicago) and is making its Western tour in all its merry making.
