WHAT FRENCH HAVE DONE IN ONE WEEK OF DRIVE

- In just one week the French in their great attack on the front from Soissons to Amiens, nearly fifty miles, did these things: Took more than 100 guns, some of large caliber. Took approximately 20,000 prisoners. Occupied twenty good sized villages, not including hamlets. Reconquered about fifty square miles of French soil. Put out of action in killed, wounded and prisoners, on a conservative estimate, at least 100,000 German soldiers, the equivalent of seven divisions. Forced the German high command to throw in twenty divisions from their last reserves, their "strategic reserves" whom they were saving for a great offensive campaign, to save their whole front in France from disaster. And the battle only begun!
