THE FOOD PLEDGE

Now that we have signed the food conservation pledge, just what are we going to do about keeping it?

This is a question that we should all ask ourselves, and if we are good Americans the answer will be emphatic—we are going to conscientiously comply with the conditions of the pledge every day in the week, and at every meal.

Food saving is the immediate and urgent duty of every man, woman and child in civilian life. It has been asked by our government, and it is a necessity for the success of this war.

The fact that food conservation in the United States is not compulsory but is merely asked as a volunteer service should be an unflinching appeal to Americanism. If you are behind your government you will keep your pledge and be glad of the opportunity to eat a little less of the prescribed foods in order that the underfed women and children of our allies may have more; also that the men fighting our battles at the front may be abundantly supplied with "fighting fuel."

There are many branches of service in Uncle Sam's army. The food conservation service is the only branch open to every man, woman and child in the nation. The enlistment should be 100 per cent, and each enlistment should mean a definite saving of wheat, meat, sugar and fats—the four staples of which there is a world shortage and which must be supplied by the United States to our allies in this war against war.

After signing the Hoover pledge, it is left with you personally to keep it. Your pledge is wholly an affair of honor. There is no one appointed to watch you and see that you keep it, except yourself. Are you "on the job?"

SUGAR HOARDING

Individual selfishness and lack of patriotism is threatening, in various parts of the country, Oregon not excepted, to undo the splendid work of the United States Food Administration in regulating the prices of staple foods and preventing profiteering by wholesale and retail grocers.

Reports are being made to the office of W. B. Ayer, federal food administrator for Oregon, that private individuals have been buying and hoarding certain staples, notably sugar, beyond all their reasonable needs. "The person who does this," said Assistant Federal Food Administrator W. K. Newell, "is very short-sighted, as well as entirely selfish and unpatriotic. The United States Food Administration has given the public assurance, that, there is enough sugar for all, and has arranged for an equitable distribution and a fair price, through its system of licensing the wholesale jobbers and large retailers. Under this system, which was expressly designed for the benefit of the people, all possibility of profiteering has been eliminated and the public assured of an abundant supply at reasonable prices. Now comes the individual hoarder, selfishly bent upon piling up an unnecessary store for himself, and threatens to upset the whole plan. It should be plain to anyone that if individuals hoard supplies in excess of their own needs, others will not be able to secure enough. These cases of individual hoarding are being reported to Washington, and, undoubtedly, steps will be taken to prevent this unpatriotic interference with the Food Administration's plans."

When Dreams Come True

Showing the Adventures of a Wealthy New Yorker's Spry Young Son.

From time to time during past theatrical seasons, stories have come to the newspapers regarding the successful engagement played "When Dreams Come True" in New York, Chicago and Boston.

Our local theater goers who have no doubt read these stories, will now have an opportunity of seeing this widely discussed musical comedy when it comes here to the Eugene theater, Monday, November 19.

The play tells of the adventures of a wealthy New Yorker's spry young son, who becomes involved with a French dancer, while he is in Paris, has his allowance cut off by the irate parent, and thus is compelled to go home in the steerage. In the first cabin there is a young girl whom he sees and with whom he falls in love from afar, but of course cannot meet until both are on shore, where trouble accumulates for them. In the course of the play, the young fellow finds himself simultaneously and unwillingly engaged to three or four females of varying ages and charms, and it is not until the last minute that he is free to marry the dream girl of the ocean liner.

The scenic investiture of the play is elaborate to the last degree.

There are nearly a score of dancing numbers, showing the latest developments of the modern dances in addition to the dances that were popular a score of years back. The song numbers introduced in "When Dreams Come True" are all of the popular whistleable variety and were composed by Silvio Hein, who gained fame as the composer of some of Marie Cahill's most pronounced song hits.

The chorus, composed principally of pretty young girls who can sing, dance and wear gowns fetchingly, is one of the features of the performance.
