FUEL HEAD COMMENDED

Position Taken in Regard to Oil Distribution is Upheld.

Belated commendation of the stand taken by Fred J. Holmes, State Fuel Administrator, in protesting attempt of oil distributors to force all sellers into the closing agreement reached him yesterday. N. B. Beecher, counsel for the oil division of the United States Fuel Administration, sent Mr. Holmes a letter saying: "We think your position is entirely correct, that in view of the fact that no order with respect to closing has been issued by the Fuel Administration, distributors were free to comply or not, as they saw fit, and that the oil companies were not justified in refusing to sell to those who failed to comply."

W. W. EBBETT of the Main Garage always knew he was right in the recent fight with the Standard and Union Oil companies. It was nothing more or less than a scheme to put W. W. Ebbett out of business, but I played the game too square, and while I am frank to admit it hurt me and my business for a while, I am now safe and doing more business than ever. You will always find me and my workmen ready to do the right thing by you. If we make a mistake or do work for you that is not satisfactory let us know; we either make it right or give you back your money.

ALLEN STEWART WRITES

Interesting Letter to His Mother, Mrs. H. L. Stewart.

France, Oct. 27, 1918.

My Dear Mother: I am going to try to write a bit tonight, as I haven't written for a week.

There is not much news to write; everything is about the same here as when I wrote last. I get to see more of the country around here now, as I am driving a three and a half ton Packard truck. I drove a Pierce-Arrow for while. I drove over fifty miles the other day, starting at 7 p. m. and getting back at 1 a. m. I had the best meal the other day that I have had since I left home. It was cooked by an American woman at the Red Cross. It sure was good, and I was hungry. I had been driving in the cold—just cold enough to give you a good appetite.

Tell John I saw some hop yards here that were just about the size of a city lot. The poles were about forty feet high. I don't know how they dry them, but I know how the beer tastes—about like dishwasher smells. I was in a sawmill the other day. It was a joke; it would take too long to tell you about it on paper, so I will wait till I get home, which I don't think will be very long, as things look over here now.

I have seen quite a few of the old boys of the 65th C. A. C. that have been in the hospital and were on their way back to their company. They have been on the firing line. (Mr. Stewart went over with the 65th C. A. C., was in the supply company, but on landing in England was sent at once to a hospital with scarlet fever. He was there forty-two days. He has never got back with his old company, but has been at a trench motor school ever since.)

I am in a company now; it's the headquarters company. I am sure glad to get back into a company again. There's a fine bunch of boys in this company, and we have a good time. We are in billets here. The one I am in is a big stone house with a tile roof. There's twenty fellows here. We have a fireplace and I like that. The man that owns the house has fifty rabbits here in a pen. They are every color you can imagine. I saw some of the largest pigeons the other day I ever saw. They must have weighed three pounds apiece. They were dark blue in color. I would like to send a pair home, but no chance.

Yesterday I saw an old Frenchman killing a hog. After he had killed it he piled straw all around it and set it afire. That is the way they sold them here.

You wanted to know how I am feeling. Well, I haven't felt better in a long time. I haven't been sick since I left the hospital in May. I had a little trouble with my left eye in June; just got something in it, I guess. They have about the same weather here that you do in Springfield, and more mud. I have a good pair of boots, a leather coat and big gauntlet gloves, so let it get cold.

Lots of the boys are going on furloughs now. I was going on one the first of next month, but I guess I'll wait till the first of the year, then the war will be over and I can take a good one then.

Well, there is nothing much to write about so will close. I will write again in a few days. As ever your son, CHAS. ALLEN STEWART, Headquarters Bat., French Art Center, A. P. O. 903.

The Boys in France

were served a bread that served them when the hardships of war demanded the utmost of soldierly endurance. It was made to nourish, strengthen and give stamina and it did all that. It was made with the best wheat flour—perhaps not as appetizing as that baked with better facilities—but the health-giving ingredients were in it just the same. Such a bread is Elephant Bread—but with the added zest of being scientifically baked in a cleanly, modern way. Elephant is the last word in a wholesome, nutritious and palatable bread for YOUR table.
