The Grandoldope

We have found One consolation In riding on the streetcars— It's fun watching Folks squirm On the hot seats.

Dear John: We were much grieved to learn That you are to lose All of your efficient Dispensers of Carbonated Elixirs Via the Hyman route. We would suggest That in these days of Rank uncertainty When you secure Another star mixologist You cop her out yourself Before these outside performers Get even a look-in. Believe us, John, It's the only system And has numerous advantages. For instance: While you can't very well Fire her Without causing domestic discord At the same time She don't dare to quit. Besides that When you pay her her wages You can borrow it back again By pulling some of this "Mutual interest" stuff On her. That is— You invest her wages In "the business." She will swell up considerable Over this and say "We" are planning this And "John and Me" Are going to do so In "our" business. But you must not mind that. Just let the dear thing rave Over owning half the store If she wants to. Why, John, it's a Regular cinch. "Salaried employes" May be alright For an institution Like Booth-Kelly. But for a soda fountain And a drug store The Blarney System Is the grandoldope. Trusting these few lines Will find you well, dear John, And delirious, We remain infernally yours.

This bug has a cow's face. You would perhaps not notice this cowlike face and fur collar unless you should use a pocket lens, which every scout should have. Then you will find the monohammus or sawyer beetle extremely interesting, says Edward F. Bigelow, scout naturalist, discussing this curious insect in Boys' Life. These beautiful brown and gray beetles are, including the antennae, about an inch and a quarter long. The antennae or feelers are as long as the body in the case of the female and twice as long in the male. Where shall you look for these curious beetles? Search among the needle-like leaves of the pine and fir. The larvae are found in the sound wood of these trees. Sometimes the mature beetles occur in such numbers as to do real injury to the trees, but ordinarily they are not very plentiful, and most scouts are not familiar with them, even where they are fairly abundant.

Spot to Be Avoided. It happened in Paris. He was black, a Yank soldier, and from New Orleans. He was heading toward the Seine, when an on-coming comrade, same color, halted him. Said the comrade: "I'd be advisin' you, Lestah, not to go too near that river; they's likely to be lookin' foh a molasses detail."
