

Details Carried to Absurdity.
 Trivial details not infrequently become the pivot of momentous decisions, in which cases an element of absurdity is supplied by the breadth of the contrast. A case in point arises in the discussion among English literateurs concerning Shakespeare's alleged "hand" in the play of "Sir Thomas More," in which one expert occupies almost a column of small type in the literary supplement of the Times of London in describing the construction of the letter R as found in one of Shakespeare's autographic documents. The imposing array of warlike and nautical terms in the modest letter, such as level, baseline, run, foreland and boundary line, may astonish many who have been accustomed to form it with comparative ease, while the division of the letter into sections and subsections by this savant for purposes of discussion endows the old scrivener's art with unexpected dignity.

Matter of Priority.
 While the people of Denmark are glorying in the antiquity of their national flag, the "Dannebrog," which claims the honor of seniority among all the national flags, and are commemorating its origin in the thirteenth century, Belgian and German patriots are scouring the Middle Ages on a mission of vital import to their respective flags. The new German state has given indications of adopting for its colors black, yellow and red, disposed horizontally. This has aroused protests in Belgium, which claims priority in precisely the same colors, similarly disposed, and patriotic societies are said to be forming to take action to prevent Germany's adoption of them. The Belgian claims are based on the colors of the princes of Flanders and Brabant in the thirteenth century, while the German case is said to rest on the use of the colors in question by the legend of the Danes.

What's in a Name.
 Names are said to be the most important element in the success of a business. A name which is suggestive of the product it represents is a great asset. The name of a business should be distinctive, and should be easy to remember. It should also be suitable for the product it represents. A document suggesting that the holders of certain lands in Scotland are bound under heavy monetary penalties to marry at the royal pleasure has been brought to light during a Scottish appeal case in the house of lords. The document is said to have been prepared by the king and queen of Scotland in 1559 and it refers to a tenure known as a "wed." The heir or possessor of land held in this manner cannot obtain possession until they are twenty-one years of age if males and fourteen years of age if females. If any holder on taking possession are not married they are bound to marry at the pleasure and will of the king with persons of good reputation and similar rank. The penalty payable to the king for refusing such a proposal is said to be double the revenue benefit of the marriage. "Which marriage" adds the order, "is estimated each year in this court by and about the value of the lands."

For a Weak Stomach.
 The great relief afforded by Chamberlain's Tablets in a multitude of cases has lately shown the great value of this preparation for a weak stomach and impaired digestion. In many cases this relief has become permanent and the sufferers have been completely restored to health.
