

When You Want It Bad You Want It Good

This is not a paradoxical statement, but a truth which may easily be demonstrated when it comes to the purchase of drugs.

If the drugs you buy are impure, if they lack strength, or if they are improperly compounded you may never know the difference—yet the difference might mean the difference between sickness and health.

When you need something badly—make sure that you obtain good quality.

Poor drugs are expensive at any price.

Come to us and you'll get the finest drugs and service obtainable. The successful record of our store is a guarantee of this fact.

Names Omitted From Honor Roll

The attention of the News has been called to the following omissions from the list published in last week's issue of men serving in the world war from Springfield district:

C. A. Swarts, son of C. E. Swarts, enlisted in June, 1918, in the signal corps. The young man was at Camp Funston for eight months, and his division had received overseas equipment and was ready for departure when the armistice was signed.

Vernon A., son of Mrs. T. A. Rathbun, enlisted in the cavalry in April, 1917, and was later transferred to the artillery. He received his discharge at Camp Logan March 15 last.

Carl Phettyplace enlisted in the navy and served for about a year.

Wesley M. Ware was in the service for about a year, receiving his discharge at Camp Lewis early last spring.

James Davis enlisted in the regular army in 1918. When his division, the Thirtieth, was ready to sail the armistice was signed. Mr. Davis is also a veteran of the Spanish-American War.

Culling Poultry

Corvallis—Poultry men might have saved enough money to pay for the world war if they had known 50 years ago what is known today about culling poultry, declared James Dryden, professor of poultry husbandry of the college, in speaking Thursday morning to 250 poultry enthusiasts—men, women and children—at the all-day culling school.

If poultrymen in general had practiced what is known about culling in the last three years the money saved would more than equal the spruce production waste, Professor Dryden asserted. On every farm, even where the birds are given good attention, at least 25 per cent are either nonlayers or poor layers. It costs the poultry men millions of dollars annually to keep these birds, he said.

Help Workers To Get Homes

From all over the country there comes the report of concerted effort to overcome shortage of dwellings. In some places people insert advertisements in newspapers offering reward for anyone who will find them a home.

Industries prosper where there are comfortable homes for workers.

Many manufacturing concerns took up the housing problem and have built hundreds of homes for workers.

If you can persuade a worker to buy a home on credit and pay interest instead of rent, he is more apt to become a good constructive worker for the good of the community.

Voluntary Mediation Council

Salem, Oregon, has established a district to mediate all differences between employers and employes. The council is composed of three representatives of organized labor and three employers. The American Federation of Labor invited the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen to select a representative on this mediation body. The first matter to come before the council was adjustment of the printing trades wage scale.

Salem—Obtaining positions for ex-service men with technical training is the problem that now confronts the war department, according to a letter received today by Sam Kozer, assistant secretary of state, from Edwin C. Wemple, director of the western department. Included among these applicants are engineers, lawyers, business men and office managers. The letter urges the secretary of state to refer this information to all county agents and surveyors in Oregon in hope that the men now returning from overseas may get positions when they are ready to return to civil life.
