

COAST BANKS ORDER 100,000 HAND BOMBS

Grenades Intended for Our Doughboys Given Away Free

San Francisco—Banks and Trust Companies of the seven states in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District have ordered nearly 100,000 hand grenades which they will give free to purchasers of War Savings Stamps and Treasury Savings Certificates. The grenades are expected to arrive at the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco from Washington within the next thirty days, but owing to probable freight delays, no exact date of arrival can be given.

These hand grenades which the War Department had on hand when the armistice was signed, all loaded with TNT to bomb the Germans out of their machine gun nests and dugouts, have been turned into savings banks by simply taking out the TNT and cutting a coin slot in the side. Save for those alterations they are regular hand grenades known as the Mills Bomb No. 11. As souvenir of the Great War they have been sought after avidly in the East, where one enterprising firm, which managed somehow to get a few of them, put them on the market at a dollar each. They sold like hot cakes.

Persons up to twelve years of age can get a grenade by purchasing one War Savings Stamp; 12 to 18 years, two stamps; over 18, one $100 or one $1000 Treasury Savings Certificate, all of which mature in five years and bring four per cent interest compounded quarterly.

Ask any bank about them and get your name in today. The supply is limited. These are the only hand grenades in this country. They were ready for shipment to our doughboys when the war ended and were turned over to the Treasury Department by the War Department to stimulate thrift and saving through the purchase of Thrift and War Stamps regularly.

TEXAS TAKES LEAD IN WAR ON PROFITEERS

Young People's Economic League Boycotts Merchants Who Overcharge

Dallas, Texas—In its fight against the high cost of living, the Young People's Economic League of this city is urging everybody to refuse to buy high priced clothing and shoes, to purchase groceries and meats only where they are being sold at a reasonable price and to put what has been saved thereby into War Savings Stamps and eventually into Registered Treasury Savings Certificates.

The Young People's Economic League, composed of both men and women, is working hand in hand with the Housewives' Chamber of Commerce, which was a prime mover in establishing a municipal market place, where farmers bring their produce and sell directly to consumers. This municipal market proved a success from its inception.

"By buying carefully," said one of the committee chairmen of the Young People's Economic League, "considerable money can be saved, even with prices as high as they are now. We are urging everybody to take what they have actually saved and invest it in War Savings Stamps. They will thus be putting dollars whose purchasing power is low at work earning interest until the time when they are worth more."

"Money invested in War Savings Stamps is always earning more money for the investor and can always be secured, with accrued interest, on ten days' written notice. In these days of high prices, it behooves all of us to save what we can. The war may be over but the profiteer is still waging a merry little war of his own, and savings form one of the best weapons with which to whip him."

Women's Clubs Are Scarce In South America

The Club de Senoras in Santiago, Chile, is the only organization for women of the highest caste in South America, says Mrs. Ida Clyde Clark, well-known author of New York city, who has recently returned from an investigating trip in the Latin-American countries for the War Work Council of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Mrs. Clark visited the club, which is purely a cultural one, and met all of the officers. "However," she says, "there are evidences everywhere of an awakening of social consciousness among the higher class women of South America. I was asked to speak on the woman movement in North America one day in Buenos Aires, thinking I would address a dozen or so women in my hostess' drawing room. To my surprise I found myself in the Italian Opera House with every seat occupied by women anxious to hear what we women are doing in this country. Fifty or sixty women, wives of the most prominent men of the city, called upon me in the next few days to find out in greater detail about the liberty which North American women have in thinking and acting for themselves. One night the wife of a wealthy banker brought me a copy of a book which she had written on "The Moral Question," explaining that she could not possibly let her husband know what she had done.

"Nevertheless, there is scarcely a profession or calling into which South American women have not entered in large numbers and these are increasing rapidly. One of the great difficulties in the way of women working is that there is no place in all South America where a business of professional woman can go alone and get a noon-day luncheon, although every few doors places are provided where men go and drink coffee at all hours of the day. Because of this all professional and industrial women are forced to carry a cold luncheon to work. Housing difficulties are so bad in the small towns and country districts that the cities are over-supplied with school teachers while there are not enough in the country."

HE'S GOT MONEY

"He's got money." Admit that when you hear that said of a man you instinctively look him over—look him over pretty respectfully as a rule. Whether you want to admit it or not, you have a bit of admiration for him.

Why? Because he is a man above the general run of human beings. He is a man who is independent—a man who looks the other fellow in the eye and tells him to "go to hell." He can't be bullied. He knows his rights and is in a position to demand them. His money gives him that power.

Independence is the open doorway to happiness. Only the possession of money or of things worth money can give independence. There is only one legitimate way to get money. Earn it and save it. All the capital in the world today was first earned and then saved.

You—everyman and everywoman—can be independent. Each week or month take so much out of your wage or salary envelope and invest in Thrift and War Savings Stamps. Live on what is left. Meanwhile the money put into the government securities goes to work earning 4 per cent interest compounded quarterly.

Make them say "He's got money" when you go by.

MILLIONS IN BERRY CROPS

The fruit industry in Oregon and Washington has at last been put on a staple basis through the development of fruit juice, preserving, canning and other packing industries which assure a ready market for the growers' products.

As usual it took individual initiative and enterprise to bring this about. The pioneers in the fruit industry in the northwest had the courage to spend money advertising loganberry and apple juice. It was a hard pull, but the product was good and the demand grew until this year the public asked for more than could be had.

The market has been created. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent in advertising to tell the world about our wonderful fruit products. The farmer is getting the direct benefit from this campaign, for it is making a market for his berries and other fruits and vegetables faster than he can produce.

The pioneers in the manufacturing end have created the market and the question now is will the growers furnish the raw material fast enough to keep pace with the demand.

Every community should interest itself in seeing that increased berry acreage is put out, for this will mean more juice factories, canneries, evaporators, packing plants, etc. This industry will furnish healthy work for tens of thousands of men, women and children a large part of the year. Loganberries are surpassing hops in profits to growers, and failures in this crop are unknown. From $200 to $1000 an acre net to the grower is the ordinary normal yield. Any man can get into the business from a quarter acre up, as it is not a business requiring vast expenditures of capital to start. Our chance is here and millions are at stake.
