THE TATTLER
(Springfield High School)

Who says old S. H. S. is asleep? Why, Monday the girls all came to school in aprons and with hair in curls. Had Mr. Roth been able to come that morning he would probably thought he had accidentally stepped into the Fourth-grade room instead of the High school assembly hall. Each lady member of the faculty was adorned in a dish apron and Miss Machen had a pretty blue ribbon becomingly tied about her head. This action of the girls aroused the boys, who held a meeting last evening, and this morning came out in old clothes, neatly patched trousers, or coats without the patch, gay neckties, etc. They arranged themselves in the hall, and as Mr. Roth rang the bell they serpentine about the assembly hall under the lead of Milton Coffman; then gathered on the platform and gave a couple of High school yells.

FROSH ENTERTAIN THE UPPER CLASSMEN

Last Thursday morning was one of special delight for the members of the upper classes, as they were given twenty minutes' entertainment by the freshmen. Their programme was as follows:

Speech by president, Alice Mortensen; Recitation, Irene Kirtchener; Stunt, Leonal Vorias, Phyllis Kester; Song, Winifred Harpole, Dorothy Ditto, Alene Larimer; Recitation, Edythe Cyr; Song, several girls; High school song, entire class.

The twenty-seventh of October in the year of 'nineteen Scarcely a boy was anywhere to be seen—
For the girls in their pigtails and aprons arrayed
Marched forth in their splendor on dress parade.

For a wonder the girls all seemed to be on time getting into the study hall Monday morning, while the boys, who had been standing off in small groups, came tip-toeing in with bated breath lest they disturb the general quiet and peace which predominated. Our beloved professor being informed beforehand, fell a victim to nervous prostration and sought refuge in his home during the entire day. It was amusing to see the expression on the boys' faces as they glanced with mingled bewilderment and uneasiness over the combined force of apron-clad girls and saw again the picture of some older sister standing in the kitchen doorway frantically waving the rolling pin, or some other equally dangerous cooking utensil, at the retreating back of a small doughnut thief. But they need have no fear, for the assembly hall of the old S. H. S. is not going to be turned into a Domestic Science room, at least for a while yet. In a few days the current question of importance among the boys will be, "Oh say, have you heard the latest news? Aprons and curls are going out of fashion, Oh Joy!"

PERSONALS

Vernita Morrison, who was absent last week, has returned to school again.

The girls had yell practice again Monday night to exercise their yelling powers.

Helen Myers has returned to school after two days' absence.

Maurine Lombard entered school last week as a junior.

Hazel Brattain is back to school again after a short absence.

We are very sorry Mr. Roth is not with us today and we hope he may be well enough to come Tuesday. He will miss the excitement of the girls' apron day.

Miss Sybil Westfall, who has been absent from school for some time on account of illness, returned today. We are glad to have her with us again.

JOKES

Miss Donzella Abrams, in the extreme fear that she might lose her General Science book and never recover it, has put a one-cent stamp and her address on the fly-leaf. In case this book should go sailing off into space to learn more about those mysterious planets, please place the stamp on the outside and send it back to its owner.

Mr. Roth (in General Science class): "Now, you people who drink coffee, why wouldn't you just as well eat four or five coffee berries as to drink a cup of coffee?"

Pupil: "Because we have to work harder to chew the berries."

Mr. Roth: "Oh, you lazy boy. I'll bet you can chew all day on a stick of gum and never get a bit tired."

Mothers and sisters didn't have to press the boys' suits Tuesday. Oh! the suits were pressed beyond description.

Tomatoes, apples, and rose buds are quite interesting objects these days. Ask the Domestic Science class.

In English I class Tuesday morning, Miss Derflinger had the pupils do some transposing of sentences. Theo. Cogill was called upon and he said, "What shall I do?"

Miss Machen, to Vivian in Algebra: "If you are 15 years' old and your father is 25, how old is your father?"

Vivian: "25". (Pretty good work for a freshman, don't you think so?)

Mr. Hamlin (in Teachers training class): "What is vermin?"

Juanita: "A bug."

POOR REASONING

Chicago.—J. Ogden Armour of Armour & Co., Ernest A. Hamill, president of the Corn Exchange National Bank; Julius Rosenwald, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and several other Chicago millionaires, are going about today clad in shoes recently half-soled.

They refuse to pay $14, $16 and $18, the price "good shoes" are selling for here.

Armour says he bought his first pair of new shoes in three years last week.

Rosenwald, whose company owns a shoe factory or two, hasn't taken a pair of new shoes out of stock for two years.

All of which hasn't anything to do with limousines. You can bet your bottom dollar that Armour and the rest of them "half-sole" their limousines too.

Men with money always refuse to pay the other fellow's price. The other day a wealthy man in San Francisco spent a half day haggling over the price of an expensive automobile. He finally forced the price down fifty dollars.

"Well, I saved that much, anyhow," he said, exhibiting the $50. "I hate to pay the other fellow's price."

Rich men are rich because they buy carefully and save. Get the saving habit. Work over your list of "necessities." Cut out the expensive things. Put your money in War Savings Stamps. They will bring you 4 per cent compounded quarterly.
