things to sell are made were planned so that they could start them going just as soon as peace came. All of the German workers, the laborers and mechanics are, without being told, working at least ten hours every day when most of ours are not working more than eight hours and many of them less. Our men are striking for shorter hours and more money right at a time when the only thing that will save this country is for everybody to forget their selfish interests and work hard and produce in large quantities.

"But, Uncle Ted, what has Germany got to do with us even if she is working harder?" asked Jack.

"Just this. The Germany money is so low that it is to the advantage of other countries to buy the material she has ready for the market. If she has goods ready because she is working night and day with all her energy then she can sell to the world while we are not only going to sleep but having a labor war right in our own country. You see that is what Germany is doing, while in this country the chief labor leader says, 'I will tie up every industry in the United States by ordering all workmen who belong to the unions to quit unless you give us what we want.' To surrender to them would mean that about 3,000,000 people in the United States would tell nearly 100,000,000 people what they would or would not do. The great lesson to all of this is that neither congress in Washington nor the state law making bodies can solve the situation. The real, true Americans, men who think and act like the great Lincoln, must meet the situation and get rid of the bad foreign group of men and women who at present seem to have control of labor. When we saw we had to go to war with Germany practically every man, woman and child was loyal. The men went to fight, the money was given for guns, bullets and shells, and we beat Germany. The same danger from Germany is with us again. Only this time is it simply of another kind. We must meet it with the same spirit or we are lost as a country. It is not money, not lives this time but work that will count."

"Well, I guess we will show Hermann a few things," said Jack. "We just must work and produce and I for one will help by telling everybody I can."

UNCLE TED'S BED TIME STORIES

"Of course, Jack," began his uncle, as he drew up a chair, "Hermann should not talk that way, no matter how much of what he says may be true. He and his father are making their living in this country and they should forget Germany and be loyal Americans. But it so happens again, that some of what he says is true. I will explain the matter as best I can. For a long time the various labor unions in this country have been going on strike. That is, if they want more money, or shorter working hours or both, and their employers feel that what they are getting is enough, they quit work. We have had strikes in this country for years and years but as a rule they have been conducted quietly and after a time the troubles were settled and the men went back to work as before. But during the past year, especially since the end of the war, the various unions have been striking and some of their members who act like the bolsheviks of Russia or the "Reds," as they are sometimes called, have used bombs to blow up houses; have fought on the streets and destroyed property in general. They are not all that way but many of them go so far as to threaten to destroy our government. Right now there are some 300 strikes going on in the United States. A great many of the men who work in the steel mills are striking and rioting. Troops had to be called out in Gary, Indiana, a big steel town, to protect property and the lives of the people. The soldiers found many of these "Reds" there who were trying to overthrow the government. The men who work on the piers in New York city where the ships are unloaded and loaded are on strike. That means tying up the food that is coming and going. And so it is the country over. The laboring men are getting bigger wages and shorter hours than ever before, yet they want more and more money and want to work less and less hours."

"What happens to the things these men make or do when they are striking?" asked Ruth who had just returned from play.

"That is the worst part of it, Ruth," answered her uncle. "While all of these men are away from their work causing trouble they are not producing. They go on eating and living but they are not giving anything to their country in return. Now right here is where the things Hermann said come in. Men who know more about the condition of things in Europe and especially in Germany than myself, say that within ten years Germany will be on the same business basis she was before the war. That means she is working very hard because the country was torn to pieces after the years of fighting. She has great quantities of manufactured goods stored away and the plants where
