W. H. Adrian has been suffering with a severe case of the hiccoughs. His friends do not know whether it was caused from eating too much Christmas dinner, or celebrating as did some of the easterners, or riding in a Ford. He declares that a Ford will not cause the hiccoughs, that he positively did not celebrate in the same fashion as many of the eastern people because this country is absolutely "dry," so it must have been caused by eating too much on Christmas. Or perhaps the "hics" were left in Adrian's stockings instead of the Packard auto he wanted.
