

Trade at Home--Build Up a Good, Steady Market

Realizing that the farmers of the country tributary to Springfield should be offered a market equal as good as can be secured in Eugene, the Springfield merchants are going to give the producers opportunities the equal of those to be found anywhere for disposing of their products. Not only this, but they are making increased efforts to convince the people that they can buy as cheaply and as well here as anywhere. Several merchants have responded to the need of the farmers for a co-operative service, that is, buying their produce and supplying them with their needs at the lowest possible figure. There are now ample markets in Springfield to take care of all the farmers' produce, except fruits. Livestock, poultry, eggs, vegetables and other produce can be disposed of here as readily and at as good a price as in Eugene. Among firms of this sort is the Farmers' Supply company, which has recently been established. Not only does this house buy produce, but supplies the farmers' needs in all kinds of equipment, acting as a clearing house in that line. One of the Farmers' Supply company's efforts to serve the public will be to hold an auction at their store on Saturday. This will give an opportunity for those in need of various articles to purchase at the lowest possible cost. Livestock will also be offered at the sale. Other merchants of the town who do not buy produce from the farmers are offering special bargains for Saturday, this method being taken to acquaint the people with the fact that they can do as well by trading here as elsewhere. And this not only on Saturdays but every day in the week. By trading at home the Springfield stores are enabled to build up their stock, purchase in greater quantities, and thus give to the people the benefit of better prices. In a concerted effort to make known to the public their offerings a large number of merchants are advertising on this page, giving their special lines and bargains. The spirit of co-operation and harmony that is thus shown is a laudable one, and it is hoped that splendid results will come from this move. Residents of Springfield should show their appreciation of the work of the home merchants by giving them their support. Steady patronage and cooperation with Springfield merchants will ultimately prove to the public that they are giving the best possible service.
