WILLAMETTE VALLEY CLIMATE IDEAL FOR TEXTILE INDUSTRY

The following is an item of human interest—the great industries may be brought to the western coast. The secret of success lies in embracing every opportunity of seeking the most successful means to do so.

"Only prohibitive freight rates keep the Willamette valley from becoming the center of a great textile industry. No other section of the world has the ideal conditions possessed by the Willamette valley for the successful operation of the textile industry," said George D. Orput, of Portland in an address in Eugene recently.

"Electricity in the air interferes with the making of a smooth thread. Here you have less electricity than our milk is just splendid if properly diluted. For it is too rich for the tender stomachs without the addition of warm water. It's the next best thing to mother's milk. It digests easily and is the greatest growth promoter in the world. And, best of all, it is a safe milk. Ask your doctor.

any other portion of the world. fifteen days in a year having been proved to be the greatest number of days in any year that would interfere with operations. Alkali and lime in the water makes it unfit for use in this industry. Here you have the purest snow water, soft water from your snow-capped mountains. Even your springs and rivers are free from the minerals that would interfere with their use for this industry. Your climate is mild, it has the proportion of moisture that is required to an exact nicety and you are such a distance from the ocean that there is not enough salt air to be bothersome.

"When free tolls through the canal were denied to American bottoms, the cheap freight rates for which the textile industry had worked for a quarter of a century, in order that they might start operations in the Willamette valley, went for naught. The toll that must be paid on the raw product coming and the finished product returning is just enough so that in ordinary peace times we can operate at a greater profit in Europe, but we hope that with a new administration we may get such action as will enable us to move our machinery from the textile centers of Europe to the Willamette valley. For 17 years we have been experimenting here upon a small scale and we know beyond the possibility of any doubt that the Willamette valley is the spot for all the world most ideal for our industry."

SOME POINTS ON THE ROAD BONDING PROPOSITION

Side Roads—If the present Bond Bill should fail it will take the county 15 or 20 years under any other plan than the bond plan to build the proposed primary road system. If so much time is required to build the main roads, few of us would live to see the side roads and cross roads built.

Main Roads—Build the main roads with bond money—Do it Now!—and get immediate use of them, and turn the other road tax money over to the construction of roads not on the Bond Program and we will have a completed road system in Lane County that we of the present can use and then leave as a creditable legacy to those who follow us.

Indebtedness—Cases have been cited where towns and counties have been burdened by contracting indebtedness. Thousands of cases can be cited where they have reaped rich returns from bonding. There is not a progressive municipality in the United States that has not availed itself of the bonding privileges. It would be easy to cite cases of individuals who have been foreclosed on loans, but that doesn't disprove that 75 per cent or more of the successful men of the country have been able to attain success only by means of money borrowed to enable them to obtain for immediate use the facilities necessary to successful and economical business transactions.

Borrowing Money—A reasonable estimate of the number of notes or similar certificates of indebtedness given by the people of Lane County places the number at 12,000 to 15,000, or nearly one to every three persons in the county. This merely shows the demand of individuals for ready money to use in their business and give them immediate facilities. That is all the road bonding plan proposes to do. If it is good business individually for the people of the county, it is good business in their collective affairs. We need and want the roads NOW!

Material Returns—If the Bonding proposition carries and plans as proposed are carried out our expenditures on the Coast Road and the Military Road will be matched by the state and government to the extent of $1,435,000, or nearly the amount to be paid out as interest on the full $2,000,000. In other words, our enterprise in building these roads will be recognized by the state and government so such an amount brought in and spent here will extend that the outside money nearly equal the amount of our interest. Why should we hesitate.
