Hon. Franklin K. Lane, former Secretary of Interior, left a piece of writing, dictated after the operation which was performed a day or two before his death, which several of the newspapers have spoken of as a remarkable letter. It was indeed remarkable, but not very creditable. An ordinary man, in an ordinary sickness may utter a mess of foolishness, and no notice will be taken of it. But when a distinguished public servant utters it, and he dies soon afterwards, he may be sure that it will get into the newspapers, to the grief of his children and the public, which would be glad to remember only his efficient public service.

According to the testimony of a high official of The United States, certain other high officials released Grover Cleveland Bergdoll in order that he might go and look for a pot of gold. The other end of the rainbow was located, probably by geometrical calculations, in Western Maryland. If he found the pot of gold, he did not bring it back. The problem now is to bring him back.

The state labor commission sends out a statement that there are now about seven thousand unemployed men in Oregon. Most of us had been thinking it was nearer seven million.

A newspaper story announcing a big dividend by a steel corporation bears the lead, "Steel Holding its own." A great many people think it is holding more than its own.

telegraph and mail could convey it. The day was observed by comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic, aided by citizens, in 27 states of the Union, very imposing ceremonies were observed at the Arlington Cemetery in the District of Columbia, at which Gen. James A. Garfield, afterward President of the United States, delivered the principal address.

Annually on the succeeding 30th day of May this tribute to the loyal heroes of the Civil War has been observed.

By usage and custom the observance has broadened out so as to include the graves of our dead of all previous wars, of the Spanish-American War and World War. Some touching and beautiful ceremonies were held overseas last Memorial Day as testimonials of love and respect
