The refunding proposition set forth in the notice of bond election, published elsewhere in this issue, does not mean any addition to the debt of the town. It only means putting the old debt in decent shape. It does not mean any appreciable addition to the interest charge, if any at all. The town is paying 6 per cent on this floating debt now. There are some small bond issues for improvements and a great amount of warrants now outstanding, for which better provision should be made. It is as if an individual were clearing up a lot of odds and ends of open accounts by giving his notes with fixed dates of payment, and the notes secured on his property. It is a move in the interest of clean business. We hope to present the views of some of our citizens on this matter next week.

The most sensational feature of the news we have observed for some time was one day's issues of the daily papers, last Saturday, without a line of reference to the Brumfield trial.

A number of persons have observed that the headlines on the first page of Monday's Oregonian were a shocking exhibition of the prevalence of crime in the country.

It seems a little queer that a British cabinet meeting, which has been in session for several days, to consider the Irish situation, should be held at Inverness, in almost the extreme north eastern part of Scotland. It looks a little like taking a change of venue, to get clear of local prejudice. That cabinet meeting, by the way, is one of the most important political gatherings held or projected during the year. It probably surpasses in significance to the world at large, the coming conference on disarmament.

NOTES FROM THE AUTO CAMP GROUND

"Many men of many minds" go dashing or creeping up and down the highways these summer days. And of course many women of many minds and some of them not of the same mind two days together. Many of them, both men and women, praise our camp because they have had a "rotten" experience somewhere else. That was a "bam" camp, and this is a "dandy". Others criticize our camp because there is a camp somewhere else, perhaps their home camp, which they greatly admire. Some praise or criticize the camp for better reasons. Some, no doubt, praise every camp they lodge on, while they are there, and while they are talking with the citizens of the place.

The most fluent and voluminous critic of our camp we have met; though not bitter, but rather a patronizing critic was a lady belonging to a three car party from Bend—that is, if the whole outfit did not belong to her. After the men of her party had spent their force on him, and the observer had sauntered off to interview another party, this lady intercepted him on his way out, perched herself on a block (she was rather short), to make her words more impressive, and began to picture the beauties and conveniences of the Bend camp, with the Springfield camp as a shady background. It so happened that there was no wood on the ground that evening. That was about ten days ago, and the same thing has been happening every day since.

The lady stated that the camp at Bend was furnished with wood and electric lights and stoves—and a lot of other things. The observer felt very sheepish, and had it in his mind to apologize, but it never got any farther than his mind. As they talked on, or she did, she added this information, that the Bend camp ground was brilliantly lighted, with stoves set up all over it and plenty of wood—and the observer felt like blushing he had no chance to do anything else but he realized that it would be of no use to do that, for it was getting too dark for her to see. As the one-sided conversation ran on, it came out that the camp at Bend, now was furnished with stoves and—an abundance of wood—the most brilliant electric lights and—somebody called her, and the visitor went home. We have no doubt they have a wonderful camp at Bend.

These responsible ought to see to it that next year the Springfield camp has all the fine things that all the other camps have.

Among the "characters" to be met with on our auto camp ground this season one of the most striking was a lady who was old enough to have a vivid recollection of the hardships of the journey across the plains with her parents in 1832. She seemed to be the most energetic member of her party. While the observer was talking with her, she was getting the supper, and a gray-haired lady who might have been her sister or her daughter was sitting listlessly by and looking on. The lady first mentioned was evidently the boss of the crowd, and the others were "trailers". She seemed to have ranged over great parts of Washington and Oregon in these last 69 years of her life that she has spent in the west. As in many other cases, she had been in some places where the observer had been, and known some people that he had known. Her present home "Washougal, Washington. This trip had been undertaken to "spy out the land" with a view to a location; not exactly, as we understood it, a place where she might make a new beginning and "grow up with the country"; but a place where she might settle in homes of their own those of her children who were not yet settled. Somebody had induced her to prospect the region about Ashland; but she was going back to Washougal disappointed and she remarked, with something as nearly like a sigh as a woman of her temperament could indulge, that it seemed that her hope of seeing all her children settled during her life time must be put off into the unknown future. We sincerely hope she may be able to solve the problem before many years go by.

Say what you will about the druggists offering something "just as good" because it pays a better profit, the fact still stands that ninety nine out of a hundred druggists recommend Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy, when the best medicine for diarrhoea is asked for, and do so because they know from what their customers say of it, that it can be depended upon.
