STRICT SUPERVISION BY THE U. S. GOVERNMENT

At least twice a year on dates unknown to us beforehand, a National Bank Examiner walks into the bank, takes temporary charge of its books and makes a thorough investigation of its assets, to see that it is obeying the strict national bank laws. Five times a year, at irregular periods and on dates unknown to us beforehand, we are compelled to forward to the government authorities at Washington a sworn statement of the condition of this bank. All this is for the protection of the depositors.

We would be glad to do your banking to.
